

to England, not as a traveller to amuse herself, but on a mission in behalf of her country-women, she was so overcome by the sight of Christians living in luxury instead of giving their thought and endeavour to Christian work that her friends felt it to be too great a strain for her faith to let her remain in such circumstances. Her own faith and zeal were so far beyond what she witnessed in the body of professed Christian believers that she seemed like one who had received a staggering blow. Oh, for a witnessing Church!—Missionary Herald.

- VIII. Reports from members of what they have done for the good of missions during the past year.
- IX. Hymn—"Take My Life," page 599 Methodist hymn-book.
- X. Prayer for all converts under the care of the Woman's Missionary Society.
- XI. Benediction.

REVIEWS OF USEFUL LEAFLETS.

Everyone Wanted.—A practical call to all uninterested in any work for the good of his brother man, written by Mrs. W. E. Knox. The author pictures with some force the source, qualifications and instances of the Divine call, and very truly remarks:—"There is something for each one to do, and no one can do another's work," which latter truth is often so generally misunderstood that it is the cause of many labouring in work for which neither nature nor providence intended them. According to "that a man hath," and not to "that a man hath not," is the requirement. This leaflet is briefly a summary of some useful truths, and is worthy of study and careful perusal. Price one cent.

How Mrs. McIntyre's Eyes Were Enlightened.—A brief story relating the history of one who lived (to quote Mrs. Mary Livermore) "in the basement of her nature." The author describes the better self rising to the surface by