

does not care to have anyone come to his place who runs down his business. Why, it is on the Sabbath he has the best show, and must take it. Last year he was doing well, when along comes the preacher, and spoilt his trade for quite a while,' referring to Mr. Mac-Vicar who was here for two months last summer." We like a testimony . . . kind.

One of the citizens of the West Wing has been having visions lately. They seem to consist largely of pie, burglars and texts of Scripture. This strange combination represents a disordered state of mind. We are afraid our friend has been making Thanksgiving calls recently. It is high time the local bishop took his case into consideration.

Some rules not yet posted.

I. Theologues shall not slope prayers oftener than once a week, unless they borrow S—th—I—d's beads.

II. All violin and banjo practice shall take place in the tower or basement at special hours to be determined by the President.

III. No person in a students' mass meeting shall move to reconsider a motion within fifteen minutes after it has been passed, or speak more than a dozen times to the question before the house.

IV. No junior shall be absent from the College more than one evening in a week, without submitting his case to the President and Vice-President of the Dining Hall.

V. Students entering each other's rooms shall rap with their knuckles not with their feet on the door, and shall leave when the proprietor begins to examine his watch.

VI. All freshmen, Arts or Literary, shall remove their hats and behave with due decorum in presence of senior men.

Things we see and hear:—

"Exactly!"

"That's awl roight!"

"Who's making all this silence?"

There is a broken mirror in the West Wing. Was it the painfully slow growth of a new man's moustache that shattered it, or the general expression of his face?

Wanted.—The artist whose sketch of the collector and the bulldog appeared on the bulletin board some days ago. Address, "The Journal Office."

He is with us again this session, the obsequious, persevering, accommodating tax-gatherer, and he presents his compliments in the same graceful old style.

Philosophical and Literary Society:—

This society held its regular meeting on the 23rd of November. The president, Mr. Wm. Patterson, occupied the chair.

After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, the business part of the programme occupied the attention of the members for a short time. The first item considered was the arrangements for the annual competition for prizes in speaking and reading. This is one of the most important features of our society, and calls forth a great deal of interest and enthusiasm
