HOUSE OF REFUGE. Mr. CARTWRIGHT, on rising to move the resolutions which he held in his hand, said, the subject now brought under the notice of the House was one in which, he trusted, all felt inte-rested. From ignorance and destitution many of the rising generation, he regretted to say, did not possess that necessary moral courage to enable them to withstand the temptations to vice and crime by which they were surrounded, and to the evils of which they were daily exposed. It was to provide a remedy for such a state of things- to draw the vagrant juvenile por-tion of the population from their bad influences, and to provide a receptacle for the punishment and reformation of those who come under the eye of the police as guilty of petty crimes-that he brought the present motion before the House. It mus It must be well known to every one acquainted with the criminal jurisprudence of the country, what was the nature of the crime for which juvenile offenders were generally brought within the cognizance of a court, in which the punishment inflicted was that of imprisonment in the common gaols. In these gaols there was no system of classification of the prisoners, and conse-quently so far from such a confinement proving either of imme late or future advantage, in most cases the youth convicted of some trivial offence becomes, through intercourse with older and more hardened criminals, conversant with crime, and ooks upon its perpetration with less horror, and is prepared on Every his release, to go still further into the depths of vic one entering a criminal court must be struck with the fact that crime almost without exception, is traceable to two sourceswant of early moral culture, and intemperance; and I regret to say, that it appears to be on the increase in Upper Canada, whatever it may be in the Lower Province. He had no statis-teal dersit. t cal details with which to exhibit its progress, but, taking what has occurred in this District within the last few years, he feared that crime increased in a ratio greater than that of the population. He regretted being unable, from indisposition, to proceed at any length on the present occasion with the subject; it had engaged his attention for several years, and he had become more and more satisfied that no greater benefit could be conferred on the country than by the establishment of instituare in duty bound to do, sought to discover some means of moral culture, they would become good members of society. His attention had first been called to this subject by the repre-sentations of the Warden of the Provincial Paritorial Current of the Province the Province at the Province the Province at the Province the Province at sentations of the Warden of the Provincial Penitentiary which that officer recommended that no youth under 15 years of age should be admitted into that prison. Then if that was not a fit place for them, crime must go unpunished, or the juve-nile offender sent to a worse place-the common gaol, which, under the prevailing system, was nothing but a school of vice. He held two resolutions in his hand, which he intended to move. The first declared that common prisons were unfit receptacles for children : and the second to the effect that it is desirable to provide an Asylum for children under a certain age, coming under the notice of the police, in which they would be properly classified, and where a moral and religious education would be afforded them, and every inducements to a reformation held out to them. Those he would lay before the committee, and he hoped that hon gentlemen would give their serious attention to the detuction the detu to the proposition, and device some means to preserve the rising generation in the country from the evils to which they were exposed, for they were the hope of it.
