

a temporary handle. Fry pans thus furnished have several advantages over the common type. The handle does not have to be transported, is a non-conductor, and the pan is not easily overturned. The handle may be made long enough to use without fire logs; the pan may be balanced on fire logs by removing the handle and inserting it again when the pan is to be removed. A nine-inch pan weighs only a pound. These pans, as well as the kettles which are here described, have been in use for some time by the geologists of the Lake Superior Division of the U.S. Geological Survey, where they were first seen by the writer. The bean kettle is especially used for baking beans, but it can also be made to do duty as an ordinary kettle. It is made from Russian sheet iron, the horizontal section being roughly elliptical. The cover is made to fit over the body of the pail so that the kettle can be opened without the danger of introducing ashes into it. The cover handle is of wire and when not in use lies flat against the cover. The bail is also of wire working in a swivel riveted to the wall of the kettle, and when dropped the bail lies snugly against the side of the kettle." Littell's Living Age.

While at this time other magazines are pressing their claims to the favor of the intelligent public, those of Littell's Living Age are not likely to be forgotten by those who know what its services have been in the spread of the best periodical literature throughout this continent.

The price of the magazine, $8.00 a year, is small in view of the vast quantity and high quality of its contents, a year's numbers forming four large octavo volumes of 824 pages each. As a special inducement to any who desire to make a trial subscription, the twenty-six numbers, forming the first half of the year 1895 (January to June inclusive), will be sent for $3.00. To any one remitting $6.00 in payment for the nine months, April to December inclusive, the thirteen numbers forming the first quarterly volume of 1894, will be sent free.

Perhaps no better exhibit could be found of the progress and expansion of thought in the different fields of literature, politics and science during the last half century than a complete set of Littell's Living Age would present. Each volume is a mirror reflecting the living literature of the months it covers.

Napoleon at Montebello.

Not far from Milan, on a gentle rise stands the famous villa, or country seat, of Montebello. Its windows command a scene of rare beauty: on one side, in the distance, the mighty Alps, with their peaks of never melting ice and snow; on the other three the almost voluptuous beauty of the fertile plains; while in the near foreground lies the great capital of Lombardy, with its splendid industries, its stores of art, and its crowded spires hoary with antiquity. Within easy reach are the exquisite scenes of an enchanted region—that of the Italian lakes. To this lordly residence Bonaparte withdrew. His summer's task was to be the pacification of Europe, and the consolidation of his own power in Italy, in France, and northward beyond the Alps. The two objects went hand in hand. From Austria, from Rome, from Naples, from Turin, from Parma, from Switzerland, and even from the minor German principalities whose fate hung on the rearrangement of German lands to be made at the Congress of the Empire, agents of every kind, both military and diplomatic, both secret and accredited, flocked to the seat of power. Expresses came and went in all directions, while humble suitors vied with one another in homage to the risen sun.—Century for May.

Napoleon's Use of Etiquette.

The uses of right etiquette were well understood by Bonaparte. He appreciated the dazzling power of economy, the fascination of condescension, and the mastery of woman in the conduct of affairs. All such influences he lavished with a profusion which could have been conceived only by an Oriental imagination. As if to overpower the senses by an impressive contrast, and symbolize the triumph of that dominant third estate of which he claimed to be the champion against aristocrats, princes, kings, and emperors, the simplicity of the Revolution was personified and emphasized in his own form. His ostentatious frugality, his disdain for dress, his contempt for personal wealth and its outward signs, were all heightened by the setting which inclosed them, as a frame of brilliants often heightens the character in the portrait of a homely face.
