where he is erecting $1.500,000 worth of reinforced concrete structures in the burned portion of the city.

Mr. Gilbreth declared that the spirit exhibited in the western city was the most remarkable he had ever seen.

No Time Being Lost.

"Everybody," said he, "is possessed with one idea, and that is to get the new city up as quickly as possible and make it bigger and more progressive than it was before. Now the general public does not know much about reinforced concrete, but the people of San Francisco do nothing but talk concrete, and they are learning that its use will ensure by far the best type of building for them.
