Sam Langford, Canadian Black, About Last of the Dusky Hopes

Fickle Father Time and his faithful soythe, while never neglected in mowing down veterans and near-veterans in all divisions of sports, has apparently overlooked one veteran—a dark-skinned one—who on the 4th of this month passed his thirtieth mile-stone. Experts in boxing will always contend that once a wielder of the padded mitts reaches this anniversary, he is at the apex of his career.

anniversary, he is at the apex of his career.

The "genman" in question is one samuel Langford, born March 4, 1886, in Weymouth, Nova Scotia. Altho never a champion, the Boston tar baby, as he generally is called, has been stacked upagainst the elite in the heavy division since he started his career in the ring.

Sam began wielding gloves in 1902, when he was awarded a three-round battle with Jim McVicker. Since that date, Tham, thru his manager—his lifelong mentor—Joe Woodman, has been raking in the shekels, by meeting all aspiring white hopes and brother Ethopians.

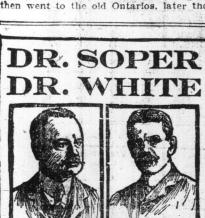

One Canadien Player Over Forty Years Old

Canadiens and Portland are playing in New York today and tomorrow for the "championship of the world," and regardless of who wins this series the Frenchmen will still be title holders. The following are brief paragraphs concerning the champions:

Lalonde, Edward, better known as Newsy, 28 years old, and a Cornwall lad of the deepest dye. Started playing hockey in the O.H.A., then moved to the Soo; from there went to Portage la Prairie, and from Portage to the Toronto pro. team. Stayed with Toronto until he joined Canadiens in 1910. His first stay with the flying Frenchmen was short and he finished the season with the Renfrew club. In 1912, Newsy hopped to the Coast League along with a bunch of other eastern stars and stayed on the coast until last season, when George Kennedy purchased him from the Patricks. Is also a lacrosse player of class. Has brains and uses them. Led the N.H.A. scorers this season, and is generally credited with being the man who planned most of the Canadien campaigns on the ice.

McNamara. Howard: Born in Peneplayed hockey in Sault Ste. Marie, then turned professional in 1909: played with Berlin and Cobalt, then with Waterloo; had a season in the Maritime League, then went to the old Ontarios, later the stopped another "cultud pusson, George Cotton, in four rounds.

"Dese colored scrappers are tough as iron," Langford commented one time, while preparing for a 20-round bout on the coast. "The white hopes dey falls much easier. Two black scrappers don't draw no money, either." The last phrase, perhaps, prompted Samuel to draw the color line—temporarily.

It was also at this time that Langford announced that he would retire in May, 1915, if he did not get a match for the title with Johnson.

"You see, I'se now 28," he said in 1914, "and dis fightin' am one tough game. I likes to fight, all right, 'cause I likes de money."

in vogue in the west, Langford drew the color line, declaring that his battle on Thanksgiving Day of that year with Henry Wills in Los Angeles was his last fight with a colored man. He emphati-

CLEVELAND, April 4.—Among the stellar features of the Grand Circuit program this summer will be the deciding of the trotting and pacing races for the three-year-old foals of champion stallions and matrons.

The American Association of Trotting Horse Breeders inaugurated the futurity seven years ago, and it since has become one of the biggest events in the harness game. The total purses distributed during the past six years are in the neighborhood of $108,000. The prizes this season will range between $18,000 and $20,000, ranking second in value to the famous Kentucky Futurity, where the control of the control of the control of the control of the most famous foals in the world.
