John Bruce Says Only Electithe tion of Labor Members Will Prevent Revolt.

by John Bruce from the platform of the Independent Labor party at the final meeting held last evening in the Labor Temple on behalf of the candidature of James Higgins, soldierlabor nominee for today's by-election. The speaker who is an international organizer for the Plumbers' Union. referred to the present capitalistic system as "bankrupt." and gave as the only hope of preventing a real revolution in the immediate future the electing of labor representatives to the legislatures and the entrust-ing to them of the task of evolving steadfast opposition to the prosecution of the war. These men had however, he declared understood too well the platitudes of the governing classes, who had called upon them to enlist and had rather suffered imprisonment.

The men who had relied upon the platitudes, Mr. Bruce continued, had gone forth in the belief that they were to crush an autocracy and participate in the construction of a new democracy. They returned, however, to an oligarchy worse than the one they had crushed and to a system so bankrupt as to make impossible the pideming of the pledges which had sent them forth to battle.

Any studied of the pledges which had sent them forth to battle.

Any studied from the first that the present capitalistic system endered impossible of fulfilment the promises made to the enlisters. In France, Italy and Germany the situation was similar and the capitalists "the controllers of the instruments of production," were realizing that a crisis was imminent and the system to which they owed their position bankrupt.

In This," he stated, "is the mere signat of the ifginh. but with his pen; not with his hand, but with his head.

J. Harry Flynn, president of the G. A. U. V., gave a spirited address and flayed the government upon its past record. He pleaded for a class consciousness amongst soldier and labor men and emphasized the practical identity of the two factions in view of the fact that 98 per cent. of the C.E.F. had come from the ranks of workmen and were anxious to be again assimilated to that sphere. The failures of past governments he pointed out, could only be rectified by the use of the ballot according to the dictates of one's thought and not by its use, according to ancestral tradition. If the condition of the worker were bad at the present, it would only, he concluded, be confirmed by the return to power of a representative of one of the old parties.

He referred to the vigor of the present campaign and declared that its significance was only in the smallest degree confined to Toronto. It was, in his opinion, a test of political feeling that was being eagerly watched by the political leaders of the entire country. Chairman Tom Mellilleu reviewed the empaign and emphasized that, as waged by the labor candidate, it had been clean and free from the use of personalities. He expressed the greatest confidence in Mr. Higgins being returned, and asked for a majority that would show definitely to the old parties that their machines had finally-

Higgins being returned and asked for a majority that would show definitely to the old parties that their machines had finally ceased functioning.

He stated from the authority of long connection with the Independent Labor Party that that body had never to his knowledge issued the pamphlet number 10 which had been referred to so frequently in the campaign of the Conservatives. The party's pamphlets, he estated, had never passed No. 4, nor had the English Labor Party to his knowledge issued the pamphlet to which the Tories referred.
