SALT IN THE BATH.

AHANDFUL of salt, preferably sea salt, thrown in the bath water, helps to prevent one from catching cold afterward, Mrs. Mann learned in her next lesson on the bath.

Salt also is a good tonic for the skin. An ounce of ammonia mixed with the water is excellent for unstrung nerves. But ammonia is not very conductive to beauty, so it should not be used frequently.

Use of bran or cornmeal bags in the bath is very good for the skin. These not only soften the water, but also the skin, and they cost but a cent or two.

An excellent bath bag is made as follows:

Make the bag from cheescloth, and put a running string in it.

"Is that all today?" he asked Mister Woodchuck. "Would you like anything eise? Perhaps your wife would like to buy something. I have some lovely olectric washing machines."

"Sh!" said Mister Woodchuck cautiously. "Not so loud. If I buy a magic lawn mower I can't buy anything eise for ever and ever so long. Of course my wife would like to have all those things you spoke of, but there is nothing like a good pair of hands. When will my magic lawn mower be here, Mister Peg Leg?"

"Right away," Mister Peg Leg assured him. "Right away—but you mustr't mind if it is a little stiff the first few times you use it. Magic lawn movers always are. After that it will work wonderfully."

TAILORED OXFORD. There is an increasing demand for the tailored oxford with two eyelets and ribbon laces.

"RUB IT IN" To Remove

THIS elaborate headdress may be of oriental inspiration, but it is very modern in effect. Tiny rhinestone bands outline the part and follow the hairline and are wound into the coils of the hair to simulate a headdress. This is equally effective for the bobbed or unbobbed, if the coils of hair happen to be the sort that are removed with hairpins, there is no objection to that. Naturally this sort of thing is not appropriate with any but evening clothes.

For Sunday's Table Treats

The certainty that you will find something very special for Sunday puts your mind at rest as you turn your stepss towards the Robinson Cake Shop.

Every week for many months they have set them-selves the task of bringing out a new cake. This striving for novelty has built up a remarkable collection of favor-ites. Their rolls are famous, their pies are special values and the cookies are legion.
