Never before was such a crowd assembled to see a basketball game. The gallery was packed full, noticeably with ladies, while along the sides every seat was taken with a line of rooters sitting on the floor. The ends of the playing floor were lined with spectators several files deep—such was the crowd.

The Bays appeared first, greeted with rousing cheers, closely followed by the Y. M.'s in read and white. The game started, and soon settled down. The Y. M. C.
