AT SYDNEY BIRNED

During the fighting the Moors suc-ceeded in turning the French flank but the reinforcements hurried to the front by Generad Drude turned the tide of battle and the conflict became a shambles for the Moors. The newspapers here generally comment on the engagement as being an event naturally incidental to the fulalment of France's duty in Morocco but they add that France's position as one of the policemen in that country brings her a heavy share of the labor brings her a heavy share of the labor and the situation is now referred to as being a war and not an "expedition of pacification." regarded with some distrust by the Moroccan Government.

Foreign Secretary Tshirsky, in conversation with representatives of the powers, has stated that Germany accepted fully the French assurances that the operations of the allied forces in Morocco would be within the terms of the Algeciras convention.

Then Herr Tshirsky has casually added in substance that of course the Algeciras convention did not contemplate France and Spain undertaking to suppress a civil war in Morocco.
