

FIVE NOTABLE BOOKS.

BY A NEW WRITER.

"Probable Sons."

Illustrated. 12mo, cloth decorated, 50 cents.

A little child, fascinated by the story of the Prodigal Son, whom she miscalls the "Probable Son," is the means of helping several wanderers to return to the Father's home.

"We do not know the author of this very touching tale. It is equal to 'Fishin' Jimmy' in its way, while as an illustration of the text, 'A little child shall lead them,' it is the most pathetic tale we remember to have seen. . . . Among the brightest, most charming and irresistible of child-creations in our recent literature."—The Independent (N. Y.).

Eric's Good News.

Illustrated. 16mo, boards, 30 cents.

A story of the influence which Eric, a little invalid boy, had upon the life of a world-worn young man with whom he became acquainted at a seaside resort.

Teddy's Button.

Illustrated. 12mo, cloth decorated, 50 cents.

A button taken from the coat of his dying soldier father becomes Teddy's incentive to vallant deeds as a soldier of Christ.

"As bright and interesting and touching a story as if Juliana Ewing or Laura Richards had written it."—The Evangelist.

The Odd One.

Illustrated. 12mo, cloth decorated, 75 cents.

Another proof of this author's extraordinary power in the delineation of child character. Betty is the odd one in a family of five little children—odd in both meanings of the word; and the friendships which she forms with older people have some strange and happy results.

Dwell Deep;

Or, Hilda Thorn's Life Story.

Illustrated. 16mo, cloth, 75 cents.

"This is an intensely interesting story. The author plainly illustrates the possibility of magnifying Christian life and character amid the whirl of gayety and pleasure in social life."—The Christian Intelligencer.
