the Church. Some Catholics object to it as deplorably out-of-date legislation. They cannot see wherein mixed marriages are abominable and detestable and are fond of balancing their inexperience and ignorance against the wisdom and motherly solicitude of the Church for the souls of her children. But we need not be reminded that worldly-minded Catholics have ever looked adversely upon statutes running counter to their own inclinations. They are responsible for much both by their loose talk and bad example. Their faith is cold, and their vision of the supernatural hampered by passion and prejudice. And when we consider that some of these people are descendants of many who suffered persecution and death rather than prove recreant to their God we come tounderstand what a blighting influence the spirit of the world has upon a disloyal and un prate about such and such mixed marriages as having proved anything but abominable and detestable. They will persist in their opinion, however, the Church may decide to the contrary. Then we have all heard that a woman of superior character can do much towards obliterating the prejudices and contributing to the conversion of the heretical party. This is a delightful bit of information, but it is a good thing not to know so much than to know so much that aint so. A woman of superior character may do a great deal, but that kind of a woman will not usually contract an alliance banned by the Church. She values her faith too highly to expose it to shipwreck and her Catholic spirit prompts unquestioning obedience to ecclesiastical superiors. And because she is superior she will always prefer a marriage "which the Church approves, which the Sacrifice (the Mass) confirms and which blessing seals." Men who have studied the question of mixed marriages are unanimous in declaring that they are the fruitful mother of misery and unhappiness and the perversion of children. Anent this latter we may quote an extract from a statistical study of conditions prevailing among American young men between the ages of sixteen and thirtyfive: "In families where but one of the parents is a church member only  $5\dot{0}$ per cent. of the young men are members of churches. Where the father and mother are both Catholics, only 8 per cent. of the young men are not church members. Where one of the parents is a Catholic and the other a Protestant 66 per cent. of the young men do no belong to a church."

CHARLES CLARKE, Clerk Legislative Assembly Toronto, 10th December, 1901.
