Tis well to have a merry heart, However short we stay ; There's wisdom in a merry heart, Whate'er the world may say. Philosophy may lift its head, And find out many a flaw ;

But give me the philosophy That's happy with a straw !

If life but brings us happiness-It brings us, we are told, What's hard to buy, though rich ones try. With all their heaps of gold ! Then laugh away-let others say Whate'er they will of mirth; Who laughs the most may truly boast He's got the wealth of earth !

There's beauty in a merry laugh.

A moral beauty too-It shows the heart's an honest heart That's paid each man his due, Aud lent a share of what's to spare Despite of wisdom's fears; And made the cheek less sorrow speak, The eye weep fewer toars.

The sun may shroud itself in cloud, The tempest-wrath begin; It finds a spark to cheer the dark, Its sunlight is within ! Then laugh away-lot others say Whate'er they will of mirth; Who laughs the most may truly boast He's got the wealth of earth !

From the St Louis Intelligencer. A PRAIRIE INCIDENT.

At a place called Yellow Creek, about half way At a place called Yellow Creek, about half way between Salt Lake and the junction Oregon and California road, we were the unwilling witnesses of an Indian massacre. On the evening previous we had cressed the creek, and encamped about a mile and half beyond. Near the creek some Snake Indians, thirteen in all, had erected their wigwams. Before dark I had endeavered, but in vain, to trade with the chief for a pony, but "no swap" was the word, though, all the while some one of the party kept exhibiting the good qualities one of the party kept exhibiting the good qualities and speed of the different animals. The young squaws excelled their lords in horsemanship or

She was an Indian beauty too, and somewhat of a coquette into the bargain. She would arch her own and herse's neck at any praise bestowed her own and horse's neck at any phase on either her beauty or horsemanship, and laugh most heartily at our attempts to make ourselves understood. She was all life and busyancy—but, nderstood. She was all life and buoyancy—but, nlas! she was a cold corpse ere the morning sun shone upon the valley in which she had been so active and happy. Just as the day was breaking, active and happy. Just as the day was breaking, we heard the ominous war whoop, and immediately followed the sharp crack of the rifle. We aroused ourselves from our slumbers and hastened toward the scene of action. A horrid sight met our view. There lay the dead forms of those who had lived and breathed the evening before; nearly all had two or three bullets in their bodies.

Our hereign of the night prayious had not as Our heroine of the night previous had not escaped: She lay outside her wigwam, a bleeding corpse. No respect had been paid to her jet black locks; the scalping knife had passed round them, and they now doubtless grace the girdle of some graceless Utah. Twelve Snakes lay dead upon the ground, nine of whom had been scalped, two old Indians and a boy having escaped the knife; one squaw had escaped by flight. The perpetrators of this horrid scene were about fifty Utah Indians, whom we saw near the camp of an emigrating party about a mile from the scene of action. With horror and disgust we turned from the sight and pursued our way. the sight and pursued our way.

Island: A curious instance of the pathos in Scripture, which also illustrates the antiquity of this bird in such health and vigor, that it was either constantly singing, or else imitating the various tounds it heard. In order to try the powers of this bird, its owner purchased a fine sky-lark.—When placed in the same room with the mocking-bird, the sound of the former was heard to echo bird, the sound of the former was heard to echo through the heave as if it were chauting, "on bird, the sound of the former was heard to echo through the house, as if it were chanting, "on fluttering wing," its well known welcome to the rising sun. The mocking-bird was silent for some time, but at last burst forth in the strains of the "ernal songster," but louder and clearer, as if mounting and stretching its wing towards heaven. The lark was silent from that moment, nor was a joyous note ever heard from it afterwards. Wishing to tost the powers of the mocking-bird still further, an unusually large price was given for a blackbird, celebrated for its vocal powers. It was placed in the same room with the mocking-bird early in the second morning its song was resumed, early in the second morning its song was resumed, and its charming notes warbled forth with all the and its charming notes warbled forth with all the sweetness and modulations which may be heard in its native "thorny brakes." The mocking-hird listened, and was silent for some time; then all at once the blackbird's notes were heard to issue forth, but sweeter and louder than those of the woodland songster. The poor blackbird heard them, felt that it was conquered, remained silent, dropped, pined, and died. From the above facts, emulation would seem to be one of the exciting causes of the songs of birds.—Jesse's Scenes and Tales of Country Life.

Tules of Country Life. Spain, there was an instrument of fiendish luge-nuity truly horrible. Its exterior was a beautiful woman, or large doll, richly dressed, with arms extended ready to embrace its victim. Around her teet a semicircle was drawn. The victim who passed over this fatal mark touched a spring, which caused the diabolical engine to open; its erms clasped him, and a thousand knives cut him into as many pieces in the deadly embrace.
