FATE'S TABLET.

You must have known her had you seen her face. That moment turned away, as by she passed; it must have told you, that confiding grace. Of one could not but love you to the last. And had you known her voice you must have known. She little talked and softly all that day. Something, perhaps, was on the June wind blown. To her could not but love you eye and nose. You did not see her, and you did not hear. She saw not, heard not, you as by she passed. You each met every day from year to year. Two shall go, seeking, seeking to the last.

IS GETTING WARM.

This Discussion Between Members of the Prohibition Execn. iv.

Evokes Another Very Strong Letter From Mr. Coatsworth to Mr. Parrott.

To the Planet—I see by the Planet of the 26th that Mr. Parrott is still talking, and as he has so humbly admitted that his pretensions regarding the calling of a convention and the writing of the fifty letters was all "false as the father of lies," and "not one particle of truth in it," it would not become me, as a lover of British fair play, to strike a man when he is down, but after being read out of the prohibition ranks by Mr. Wells and others, he has the audacity to hold up his head and call himself an upright temperance man. Smarting under the pitiful humiliation he has seen fit to single me out among his pursuers and sneeringly insinuates that I am only a humble laborer, and drive me still further into the earth, he informs his readers that I live in Romney. These charges, although made by Mr. Parrott, are nevertheless true, and neither of them do I consider to be a crime. I am rather proud of them and although I earn my living by honest toil, I have the same right to express my views on the temperance question as one who goes about among the laboring people trying to obtain "something for nothing."

Then he has discovered that he has made a great mistake in appointing me a member of the county board. He could not have told a greater truth than to make that statement, for never could he have made a greater mistake than to think by making me a member of that board he could drag me into the mud puddle of his own favorite party. I am delighted to point out these mistakes to my superior officer. Then, in a cowardly manner, he insinuates that I am "trying to help a cause that is not prohibited." "Thou art insensate, O man, who ever thou art, that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another thou condemnest thyself, for thou that judgest, dost the same things." And if Mr. Est. Everything Parrott were a man of honest thoughts, such a charge would not have found a lurking place in his gigantic brain. As a true prohibitionist, I cannot vote confidence in a party that has expended two hundred thousand dollars of the people's money, and finding a majority of the votes polled in favor of prohibition, will turn about and laugh at the will of the people, or how could I consistently support a party who in opposition have neglected to demand what the people have asked for and if I can be found guilty of moving a vote of confidence in either of the parties now struggling for power, would deserve that my name should go down to posterity coupled with those of Ananias, Judas Iscariot and Mr. Parrott, as an example of hypocrisy and treachery, but I challenge my great superior to produce a man who has any regard for the truth who will say that I have ever attended a meeting or uttered a word that will connect me with that party. This is the position that Mr. Parrott should be found in rather than attacking true friends of temperance with insinuations that are both false and cowardly.

Then he wants to know why I did not ask for a convention long ago, while he knows well that I have written him more than once as president, and have never been able to write an answer from him until I pinched his toes in the public press. Then he concludes his letter by saying that I am a man of "great ability." "I might have been more profitable to me had he made that statement before the public found him out. However, if I could conscientiously return the compliment I would do so. I informed Mr. Parrott in my last letter that I was not through with him, but as Mr. Wells has already given him what I laid up for him, I have decided to leave him to the tender mercies of a charitable public as I have no desire to use space in your valuable columns to advertise a fake ank and will feel that I have done my duty if I have removed the sheep's clothing and laid bare the dangerous tusks of that self-constituted saint to the temperance people of Kent and the little lambs before whom he stands as a Christian, example, and though he has prostituted the office he holds it will serve to prove the trash contained in the old fable that it takes more than feathers to make a goose look out of a fragrant bed. Thanking you for space, I remain yours, for Prohibition.

"Hoodoo" Flower.

There are many superstitious fancies about the lilac. It is the flower which is fatal to love affairs. Though the scent is so sweet and lilac this is so fresh and becoming, country girls rarely wear this flower as a buttonhole. "She who wears lilac will never wear a wedding ring," runs an old proverb. A boutonniere of lilac is paid for dearly by solitary spinsterhood. The village maiden lets the lilac bush severely alone.

For the same reason rustic wise women—with marriageable daughters—never allow a jug of the sweet-smelling blossom inside the house. They decorate the outside window sill with it. But "there's no love luck about the house" which contains lilac.

Londoners are not superstitious, and they gather the lilacs which grow so profusely in city and suburban gardens with a lightsome ignorance of the unlikelihood in love this charming flower confers. Village people cannot understand why "clever London folk" know nothing of the traditions of lilac-luck about the lilac.

To give your sweetheart a sprig of this flower is a sure way to break the engagement. White lilac is said not to be so unlucky in affairs of the heart as the mauve. But neither should be presented to a lover. It is supposed to prove as fatal to love as an opal ring.

It will comfort the wearers of lilac millinery—and what is more lovely than a touque of these white and purple blossoms—to know love laughs at artificial lilac. It is only the real tree-grown flower that comes between a lover and his lass. Stony-hearted bachelors have been known to sport a lilac buttonhole as a charm against feminine blandishments.—London Express.

Don't Drink Water in Gips.

As a rule it is much better to sip water than to swallow a glassful at one draught. The exception to this rule is in the morning, when one should drink a glassful or two of moderately cold water in order to flush the stomach while it is tubular. At other times, however, sipping the water is much more stimulating in its effect on the circulation. During the action of sipping the nerve action, which slows the beating of the heart, is temporarily abolished, and in consequence the heart contracts much more quickly and the circulation of the parts of the body is increased. Another advantage in sipping is the fact that the pressure under which the bile is secreted is considerably raised. It has been stated on good authority that a glass of cold water slowly sipped will produce a greater acceleration of the pulse for a time than will a glass of wine or spirits taken at a draught. Sipping cold water will, in fact, often allay the craving for alcoholic drinks—a point worth remembering by those who are endeavoring to reform.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Guard the Traveler.

Believing that railway carriages are greatly responsible for the spread of consumption, the German health department has resolved on making a reform. The ceilings of the carriages are to be varnished, and all corners likely to harbor dust are to be abolished. The seats are to be of plain material and devoid of embroidery, the favorite haunt of dust and microbes. The cushions will be movable, so that they can easily be changed from carriage to carriage, which will enable the floor to be properly kept clean.

A Woman's Eyes

Will tell her love, though every other feature be hidden under the oriental Yashmak. A woman's eyes are equally eloquent as to her health. She can teach her lips to laugh in spite of pain, but the eyes will never be partner in that deceit.

Deep hollows, dark circles, wrinkles at the corners, tell the story of pain and sleeplessness. Much of the nervousness, sleeplessness and suffering in general, endured by women, is caused by a diseased condition of the womanly organs. When that diseased condition is cured there are no more hollow, dark ringed eyes. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, cures irregularity, inflammation, ulceration, and female weakness, stops enfeebling drains, strengthens the nervous system and gives to the mother health for her duties, and happiness in her performance.

"My niece was troubled with female weakness for about four years before I asked for your advice," writes Mr. J. W. McGee, of 64 St. and Princeton Ave., Chicago, Ill. "You advised her to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which she did faithfully for nine months, and now we must acknowledge to you that she is well and cured. We cannot thank you enough for the cure. We have recommended your medicine to all our friends, and believe it to be a wonderful discovery."

The Guile of Infant Guilelessness.

The guilelessness and sincerity of the infant mind, so popularly accepted admits of various and alarming phenomena that wreck the temporary peace of many an innocent adult victim, says Demorest's.

Even the best little child in the world excited by company or novelty of environment, is liable to bring the blush of mortification to its mother's cheeks by a flaunting of factitious ignorance or by exclamations that mislead.

Contradiction of the irresponsible little offender, or explanation, find slim credence. The grown-ups who smile inwardly. Would a dear little innocent like that be capable of misrepresenting?

But the dear little innocent, stimulated into a distorted view of what has always been familiar before, becomes unconsciously a deceiver, and exclaims: "Oh, mamma!" "Oh, mamma!" "Oh, mamma!" under the glow and excitement of sudden "company" to dinner. "What have we got flowers on the table for? Oh, don't they look pretty—flowers on the table!"

Small purpose does it serve—the reproachful reminder of the humiliated parent. "Why, darling, you know we have flowers on the table every meal!" Not a guest but secretly believes the decoration novel to the baby eyes.

"Papa, what is that big brown sing dere by you?" queries artlessly the maid, to whom truth is the most ordinary diet, but who is excited into a pose by the presence of her guests.

Few mothers but have known the exasperation sometimes of the little angelic cry before visitors: "Oh, mamma, you all dressed up! What you put on your pretty dress for, mamma?" When mamma is really in her most ordinary attire.

Everybody knows such instances, and yet everybody secretly discounts parental contradiction.

Truly, the processes of the infant mind are many a time inscrutable.
