The Meaning of a Smile.

We speak in many tongues, we mean as we speak, we mean as we smile. Who does the work that men must do with sword and spear and plough and pen? My journey may be strange to you, I may not know where you come from, nor comprehend if you really, for your preaching may be all in vain. But we are brothers when we smile.

The Malay may not understand when I explain to him my creed. The Mongol, all unsmiling and bland, may think that I am mad, indeed. To think the things I say may be a far, far fashion to beguile, but they extend their hands to me. And know my teaching when I smile.

The spoken word may not convey from the heart the meaning I mean. Where Malacca's crimson shade, from the East to the West, And from the Hudson to the Don—There is one meaning for a smile.

We speak in many tongues, we mean as we speak, we mean as we smile. Your words may have no meaning when you smile, but his hand is not your hand, nor his heart your heart. For he will not understand when you smile. You when you grasp his hand and smile. —Said a Bismarck Kneen.

The Hill of Hope.

Alaster's heart had named it the hill of hope—a bare rise, looking eastward over great breadths of farmland, and down miles of turpentine. That way, said her heart, the fairy prince would come riding, some day, to take her out of the gray stagnation of things.

Alaster was fanciful. A girl is apt to be when she has never known aught save the busy chattering of an elderly household. Her mother had died when she was born. Of her father, the two great aunts, spinsters both, never speak. They had money enough—a spacious competence. Some day it would all come to the child. She would have no need to mix in the world—as to marriage, that was to be shunned as deadly. Had it brought anything but heart-break to her mother, the first Alaster? She had been wild and wilful, a beauty, fiercely courageous, also fiercely loving and hating. She had chosen and wedded without or no—to come back in a year, alone, and crushed, to welcome death, even though baby tugged at her heart.

Her heart must be saved from such shipwreck. Thus the good aunts, they kept her close. She never had a playmate, never a friend, never a school. Aunt Susan taught her the three R's. Aunt Debby music and embroidery—for the rest, there were books, a whole roomful, old but good leather bound mostly, and smelling of cedar shelving. Alaster browsing happily among them, learned of life as though she saw it inverted in a mirror. She had a sense of not belonging in the household. The aunts were fair, dumpy, placid—even their small tempers had not brought wrinkles, though they were past sixty.

Alaster was tall and thin, rangy in motion, full of delight in freedom, vividly alive throughout. She paced for action, for air and change. When the pluing had grown so wild it was pain, Malloes came. Not romantically, if she did spy him first from the hill of hope. Malloes by his very look ppt romance out of court. He was stoutish, red of hair, freckled as to face, with snapping blue eyes, shrewdly set. Notwithstanding, he was neither common nor common-place—there was too potent an air of efficiency for that.

He was hopping mad, and very busy when he met Alaster, a gaze. There was seed of rash work in running a transit line—and the men he was depending on to help him had not shown up. Worse—he had promised to go hunting for them—he had promised to meet a high percentage exactly at o'clock there at the foot of the hill. Spying Alaster's straw hat upon top of the rise, he mistook her for a curious country lad, and shouted: "You can't get your legs as long and light."

"Make it a hall and I'll talk to you!" Alaster called back. She sensed

Intensive Farming

The Island of Jersey, in the English Channel, if transplanted, could be placed in Kings County, and would occupy a strip in that territory about five miles wide. That little island supports a population of 32,000, or something more than 200 people to the square mile. These people live exclusively by farming. They are well fed, well housed, well clothed and contented. They have no paupers. A man who has a farm of four acres is accounted well off. One who has ten acres is a large proprietor and a full of business. One who has sixty, and there are a few, is a wealthy gentleman, plumed in a whirl of business. Where farms are so small and land so valuable there are no waste places. Every inch of land is cultivated—not merely plowed, harrowed and seeded but made rich and pushed to the utmost limit of tillage. All manures are religiously saved. The liquid manures are stored in cisterns and sprayed upon the land. Sewage is carefully gathered and used. Even commercial fertilizers are used. The soil and its requirements are studied and its every demand supplied. And it pays. True there is within easy reach an inexhaustible market, that of Great Britain, and the climate is more congenial than ours. Its superiority as a farming country, however, is not indicated so much by its soil and climatic conditions as by the methods employed; this is why we have made reference to it.

The Stomach Needs Help

The liver, kidneys and bowels must be kept active with DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fail and become torpid and clogged. The bowels become constipated and stomach derangements follow.

There is one medicine which will overcome this condition more certainly and more quickly than any other, and that is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This medicine gets the bowels in action at once and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems.

With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes its healthful condition, appetite improves, pains and aches disappear as well as irritability and depression.

You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, of Edmund, Bates & Co., Toronto.

HOW TO OBTAIN A GOOD COLOR

A Treatment to Restore the Blood Supply That Has Been Most Successful.

There is only this to tell people who are pale, weak and bloodless. You are pale and weak because you haven't enough blood and you won't be better until your blood supply is increased. You should not lose any time in increasing your blood supply, for people who neglect ailments of the slip into a deadly decline. When you have increased your blood supply you can reasonably expect to have a good color, to have lost that tired, breathless feeling, to have a good appetite and get good nourishment from your food. Now the only quick and always effective way to get a supply of new, rich, red blood is to take—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Every dose helps to make new blood, and this new blood coursing around through the veins, brings health and strength to every organ and every part of the body, making weak, ailing people, bright, active and strong. This has been proved—in thousands of cases of which the case of Mrs. George Clark, Abbotsford, B. C., is a fair sample. Mrs. Clark says: "After spending two years and six months in a hospital training for a nurse, I began to fail, in health, was very pale and the least exertion would leave me out of breath. After graduating I came to British Columbia to take up my profession as a private nurse. The first case I took I found I was not able to go on with my work. Doctors' tonics failed me and acting on my own judgment I purchased a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished them I was really surprised at the result. The color came back to my face. I gained in strength and by the time I had used nine boxes I was back at my work as a nurse. I have since married, but still have my friendly feeling for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams, Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

'I Wills' and 'I Will Not.'

The following tales are couched in school for nurses—occasional—constant reminder that spirit service is as vital as hand service in the whereunto they are called. And since we, too, are called to service of one sort or another may not these ten 'I Wills' point a clear way ahead to us as well?

(1) I will not permit myself to speak while angry. And I will not make a bitter retort to another person who speaks to me in anger.

(2) I will neither gossip about the failings of another, nor will I permit any other person to speak such gossip to me. Gossip will die when it cannot find a listener.

(3) I will respect weakness and defer to it on the street car, in the department store and in the home, whether it be displayed by man or woman.

(4) I will always express gratitude for any favor or service rendered to me. It prevented from doing it on the spot, then I will seek an early opportunity to give utterance to it in the most gracious way within my power.

(5) I will not fail to express sympathy with another's sorrow, or to give hearty utterance to my appreciation of good works by another, whether the party be friendly to me or not.

(6) I will not talk about my personal ailments or misfortunes. They shall be one of the subjects on which I am silent.

(7) I will look on the bright side of the circumstances of my daily life, and I will seek to carry a cheerful face and speak hopefully to all whom I meet.

(8) I will neither eat nor drink what I know to detract from ability to do my best work.

(9) I will speak and act truthfully, living with sincerity towards God and man.

(10) I will strive to be always prepared for the very best that can happen to me. I will seek to be ready to seize the highest opportunity to do the noblest work, to rise to the loftiest place when God and my abilities permit.

Why Own Webster's New International Dictionary? THE MERRIAM WEBSTER? Because it is a NEW CREATION, covering every field of the world's thought, action and culture. The only new unabridged dictionary in many years. Because it defines over 400,000 words, and includes 100,000 illustrations. Because it is the only dictionary with the new divided page, a "Book of Contents." Because it is an encyclopedic in a single volume. Because it is accepted by the Courts, Schools and Press as the one supreme authority. Because it knows Winsor's Dictionary. Let us tell you about this new work.

That Farmers Policy.

The remarkable idea the crops up occasionally, says the Montreal Star, that those who are opposing reciprocity are wantonly antagonizing the farmers' interests. The theory seems to be that reciprocity is a farmers' measure; and that those who are fighting it are doing so because they dislike farmers. Nothing could be more mistaken or ridiculous. No sane Canadian dislikes farmers or wishes for anything but the utmost agricultural prosperity. It is upon the success of farming that this country is being built up.

If our farmers did not prosper, our manufacturers would soon starve, our merchants would soon lose their business, our professional men could not collect their fees. We all ardently desire farm prosperity, if for no other reason than that it means prosperity for us.

But, continues the Star, we do not believe that reciprocity will help the farmers, and we do believe that it will hurt them. The average farmer runs over the list of things he takes to market, and he will see that, in an actual majority of them, the price is to-day higher in Canada than in the United States. Now how is reciprocity going to help him? It will give him access to a worse market than he has, and it will give the surplus of that market access to his own. The effect—if any—will be to cut down the prices he now gets for his produce.

The city man might possibly get a temporary reduction in some of his prices at the expense of the farmer; but the city man would speedily pay for this "penny" advantage by a "pound" loss. That is, the next step in the tragedy will be "free trade in everything" and the factory which pays his wages, or the wages of those who deal with him, will be closed. Then early strawberries may be cheaper; but he will have no money to buy any at the lowest price. The position then is that the farmer loses first and the city man next. Still to represent this policy, which begins at "at once to cut in two the profits of the farmers, as a farmers' policy, is the height of absurdity.

For summer diarrhoea in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, and a speedy cure is certain. For sale by all dealers.
