HAMILTON EVENING TIMES SATURDAY JANUARY 23, 1909

Saturday, Jan: 23 .- Though the supply Saturday, Jan: 23.—Though the supply of produce and meats on Central Mar-ket was large this morning, trade was dull, the demand being slow. As a con-sequence prices dropped in all lines. Beef and veal dropped half a cent a pound and all other meats were easy. Dairy produce was cheaper, butter dropping a couple of cents and eggc doing likewise. Poultry was plentini and the price of chickens, geese and ducks went down about 25 cents. Trade on the grain mar-ket was dull, the receipts being small. All prices were easy, but no notizeable changes occurred other than those m in-All prices were easy, but no noticable changes occurred other than those men-tioned above.

Standard prices at 8 a. m. were: Dairy Produce.

LONDON WOOL SALES. London, Jan. 22.—The offerings at the wool auction sales to-day amounted to 15,104 bales. With the exception of finest merinos, which miss American sup-port, the market was decidedly firm port, the market was decidedly irran with a hardening tendency. Continental and home traders were eager bidders for medium merinos, while crossbreds oc-casionally exceeded the opening rates, owing to American competition against home buyers.

NOTICE

Compared With Whom Even Edison is a Mere Also Ran. A list of some of the mechanical de-vices which Nature introduced in the human body and which man has been centuries in finding out was printed in the Sun not long ago. Here are a few more examples of the genius of Nature. It looks as if the old party had Edison, even with his 700-or is it 7,000-inven-tions, beaten to a finsh. The action of the valves of the heart was the original of the idea now in use in valves everywhere, from those of a pump to those of a steam engine. Their purpose is to regulate the flow of fluids or vapors in particular directions and to prevent back flow or regurgitation. The valve in the box of a pump pre-vents the water we have drawn up from returning to the well so that the next movement of the pump handle will send it out of the spout. In the case of the heart, says the London Illustrated News, we have two sets of valves, whose object is to prevent blood, pumped out from each side of the heart, from re-turning into the heart's cavities. There are certain beautiful flap valves which fail back to let blood enter but which float up on the blood, meet in the middle and larm a perfect temporary partition preventing reflux. These flap are provided with cords which allow of their meeting together, and these cords, attached to the wall of the heart, pull down against the force of the blood which would cause them to float up too far, and so the fluid must pass away by the proper channel.
