CROWN SUBPOENA SERVED.

CROWN SUBPOENA SERVED.

Crown office subpoenas ordering the attendance of Florence Kinrade, her father and mother, at the murder investigation when it is resumed on Monday afternoon, were served yesterday afternoon on the Kinrades at their boarding house, 28 Homewood avenue. Service was accepted without comment, and although George-Lynch Staunton, the family counsel, declined to say whether the witnesses would attend, it is not thought probable that the subpoena will be disobeyed. The subpoena was signed by Chancellor Boyd, it is simply a notification to attend and net a warrant, but if the Kinrades do not appear at the inif the Kinrades do not appear at the in-if the Kinrades do not appear at the inquest they must show cause.

Accompanied by Officer McKim of the Sheriff's office, Provincial Detactive Miller, who has charge of the case for the Attorney-General's department, served the subpoenas personally. Hamade application for the issue of the subpoenas at Osgoode Hall yesterday afternoon on behalf of the Attorney-General, They were issued by Edmund Hartley, Clerk of Records and Writs. The documents were served forthwith.

CORONER HAS POWER. CORONER HAS POWER.

CORONER HAS POWER.

Coroner a. ison is the man with whom the matter rests, although he will likely act on the advice of the crown.

The following is taken from section 2, chapter 12, of Boys on Coroners:

Much discussion has takez piace as to whether the public has a right to attend inquests. I seems from the best authorities that they have not. The power of deciding whe shall be present and authorities that they have not. The pow-er of deciding whe shall be present and who shall not reses with the coroner, who, togesher with all pursons who ad-ministed a possise duty has a right to preserve order in the place where it is administered and to turn out whom he thinks fit without rendering himself li-able to action for trespass. Section 5—Counsel appear to be on the same footing as general public with the same footing as general public with regard to having a right to attend inquiry. A coroner can include them if he thinks proper and counsel whether he thinks proper and counsel whether for an accused or suspected person cannot insist upon being present, and upon examining or cross-examining witnesses or upon addressing the jury, and can maintain no action against the coroner for excluding him from the room. Counsel being employed by clients to attend on their behalf makes no difference, but if any of the family of the deceased desire to be present, or to be represented by counsel such desire should be gratified except on very special circumstances.

A SERIOUS OUESTION.

The seriousness of the ruling of the Divisional Court as to the right of coroners to compel the attendance of witnesses is demanding the attention of the Attorney-General's Department.

Attorney-General's Department.
This serious phase, in the eyes of the Department, does not relate specifically to the case, but is the abstract question raised by the opinion of the Divisional Court that the cornoner's warrant could not be executed outside of the county in which it was issued. Hom, Mr. Foy, it is understood, holds that the opinion expressed was not legally binding, but that the Crown in upholding its own dignity must respect even an opinion expressed by the courts. Nevertheless, the situation is regarded as very scrious to the effectual administration of justice by the department. It means, that in all such cases the Crown would be unable to secure the evidence of material witnesses at in evidence of material witnesses at in evidence of material witnesses at in-quests, should they avoid obligation by crossing the county boundary.

WILL ASK FOR RULING. This, the department holds, is not the practice in England, where a corthe practice in England, where a coroner's subpoena or warrant holds good anywhere in the country. It is believed that the Attorney-General's Department has decided to forthwith communicate with the Attorney-General of England, asking him for an opinion on the point at issue, and further requesting the British authorities, if necessary, to apply, on behalf of Ontario, directly to the Privy Council for a ruling on the question of the jurisdiction of coroners. This, however, in no wise affects the present case, but is to create a permanent precedent for the future. If statutory definition is needed the Attorney-General's Department will at once communicate with the Minister once communicate with the Minister of Justice at Ottawa. A coroner's court is adjudged to be a criminal court, and, as such, is under Federal jurisdiction. If the Privy Council so urisdiction. If nous, the province will ask the Do-minion for specific legislation defining the powers of the coroner to compel at-tendance of witnesses. The Kinrade case thus becomes celebrated in a new sense.

The department composes itself per-turbed by the opinion of the Judges.
