THAT APPLE STORY.

Did Noah Webster Steal It, or Did the Irish Steal It From Noah? Said an old man who was an ardent ad-

Said an old man who was an ardent ad-mirer of Noah Webster: "Was Noah Webster a plagiarist or did the English steal from him? I was led to ask these questions by being shown the Universal Spelling Book, published in Dublin in 1839 by T. Tegg & Co., which contains the story of the boy that stole ap-ples, with an exact reproduction of the Websterian illustration. It runs as fol-lows: 'An old man found a rude boy upon one of his trees stealing apples, and desired lows: 'An old man found a rude boy upon one of his trees stealing apples, and desired him to come down, but the young sauce box told him plainly he would not. "Won't you?" says the old man. "Then I will fetch you down." So he pulled up some tufts of grass and threw at him, but this only made the youngster laugh, to think the old man should pretend to beat him out of the tree with grass only. "Well, well," says the old man, "if neither words nor grass will do, I must try what virtue there is in stones." So the old man pelted him heartur with stones, which soon made the 'young thap hasten down from the tree, and beg the old man's par-don.'

"Now, when I first read that story, something more than 50 years ago, no doubt entered my mind that it was made in Connecticut. And the picture accompanying it—was not that little house Jerry Gris-wold's, and the 'old man' Priest Pruden? And the boy, did he not bear a striking resemblance to me in my best white trou-sers? All these impressions remained unresemblance to me in my best white trou-sers? All these impressions remained un-til recently, when I saw the picture in the Universal Spelling Book, where it looked wonderfully Irish to me. I wish some of you fellows would find out whether Noah Webster was a plagiarist or the victim of British publishers.

"In the 'Universal Spelling Book' under the headline 'Words of Seven Syllables Ac-cented on the Fifth Syllable,' I find dr-cum-na-vi-ga-ti-on, and, under the line 'Words of Five Syllables Accented on the 'Words of Five Syllables Accented on the First Syllable,' fa-shi-on-a-ble, and having got so far I didn't wonder any more that some of my Irish brethren find it difficult to catch on to the pronunciation of Eng-lish words. But that is only a small part of what the 'Universal Spelling Book' contains. It has a treatise on English grammar, followed by the principles of politeness by Philip Stanhope, earl of Chesterfield, and a number of fables, stories, etc., besides the 'Boy and the Ap-ple Tree,''' concluded the old man.---Utica Observer.

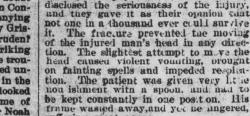

An Eastern Shore Ouestion Strangers tell us it is a fact that after the formalities of an introduction to an eastern shore man at his own home al-ways follows the question: "Is this your first visit to the eastern shore?" The origin of this custom was set forth by an the formalities of an introduction to an origin of this custom was set forth by an eastern shore man at a Cincinnati ban-quet at Newport, B. I., some years ago, when he was twitted about the peculiarity of his countrymen. The story is a true When General Lafayette accepted the in-vitation of congress in 1824 and came to this country as the nation's guest, a great reception was tendered him at the state-house in Annapolis officially by the state. The governor of Maryland at that time was an eastern chare farmer, who lived on his farm except when the general as-sembly was in sessice or when he was called to Annapolis at other times on offi-cial business. Of course his presence was indispensable at the Lafayette reception. His function, indeed, was to introduce the distinguished guest. The governor made the trip on horseback around the head of the bay, clad in a homespun suit made on his own looms. The roads and weather being worse than he calculated for when he left home, he did not reach the capital until the day of the reception and after all the other notabilities were there and wait-ing for the governor, who was hastily ush-When General Lafayette accepted the ining for the governor, who was hastily ushing for the governor, who was hastily ush-ered into the senate chamber, his clothes splashed with mud just as he was when he dismounted. The distinguished people in splendid array in the chamber confused the plain and patriotic eastern shore gov-ernor, and when he was presented to La-fayette he could think of nothing to say for the moment and blurted out, "Is this the first time you were ever in this court. the first time you were ever in this coun-try, general?" and from the day the eastern shore governor made that faux pas to this the question is religiously, patriotic-ally and proudly put to the stranger when his footsteps first touch the eastern shore strand.—Baltimore Sun. The captain gives him something out of the medicine chest to put in his tooth, and if that doesn't cure it perhaps he pulls it. It is a common thing for sailors to pull their own teeth. Their method is to put a string around a tooth and pull it. But dental forceps are carried on deep water ships, on some vessels a fair outfit of them. I remember hearing a church warden in one of our large manufacturing towns read in the lesson the following odd stateread in the lesson the following odd state-ment from the epistle to the Romans, "And if children, then hares," a some-what strange piece of reasoning. In the same connection still with reference to the insertion of this much abused letter, I heard a funny story the other day. in a Cali.ornia Hospital. A very delicate and extremely rare surgical operation has been performed successfully at the French hospita, in this city upon C. Hoffman, a young Ger-man farmer. By it not only h.s lieth, s been saved, but he is on the seedy way to the recovery of health. Heinan was employed on a farm near kanght's Ferry. During the latter part of July he fell backward off a wagon, sirking the hard ground with the back of ins head, and fractured the third cervical vertebra, an injury which in nearly every case proved fatal. An examina-tion by the physicians in the countly disclosed the seriousness of the injury, and they gave it as their opinion that not one in a thousand ever cull survive it. The fracture prevented the moving of the injured man's head in any direc-tion. The slightest attempt to mixe the head caused violent vounting, orought on fainting spells and impeded respira-tion. On Ang. 11 he was brought to the French hospital in this city, where the physicians decided upon an operation as the only possible means of saving the life of the patient. In the prestance of the hospital house staff and a number of consulting physicians the operation was performed Aug. 15. An incision was made in the neck, apping the verte rate, which showed the injury to the third process, the arch of which was removed, as was a portion of the second vertebra, thus removing the obstacle to the unare-stricted motion of the head. A Dart That Didn'r Stick A Dart That Dian's stick. No better and at the some time no more courteous robuke could well te im-agined than that once administered by Besumaschais, the author of the famous "Marriage of Figar." He was the som of a Parisian watchinaker, but had gain-ed fame, rank and wealth through his own talents and exertions. A conceited and envious young nobeman once un-dertook to wound the pride of Beaa-marchais by an allusion to his humble marchais by an allusion to his humble origin. In the presence of a large company of people who had a regard for the talented young author, this young man handed him his watch, saying: "Examine it, sir, it does not keep time well. You can doubtless ascertain the cruse:" Such was his rude haste that his hand left the watch before that of the sur-prised Benumarchais had grasped it, and it fell to the ground. "Pardon, mons eur," said the author, with grave courtesy, shooping to pick up the watch and hand it to its owner: "you see my father was light when he declared that I was too awkward to be a watchmaker."

Brought in "Pa's Prayers." Once upon a time sickness came to the family of the poorly paid pastor of a country church. It was winter, and the pastor was in financial straits. A number of his flock accuded to meet at his house and offer prayers for the speedy recovery of the sick ones and for material blessings up an the pastor's fam-ity. While one of the deac up was of-fering a fervent prayer for blessings up-on the pastor's household there was a hud knock at the door. When the door was opened a stout farmer boy was seen wrapped up comfortably. "What do you want, boy?" asked one of the elders.
