Her Highness proposed to the Marquis that they take a stroll around, and suggested rustic habliments to deceive the curious. It was agreed, Her Highness, the Marquis, Mrs. De Winton and Captain Arbourd forming the party. The transformation of the parties was complete. Her Highness had on a sadly faded cotton dress, a plain shawl and a common " cows breakfast" hat. She took evident pleasure in viewing herself in this attire, laughing at the very ludicrousness of the thing. The Marquis wore about as poor a coat as he could get from the domestics, and a "caubeen" hat, mimicking the rolling wagger of the rustic as near as possible, The Captain and Mrs. De Winton were dressed out a la rustic as near as possible also.
