NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.
We are glad to see an American issue of this publication, and especially so in so neat and convenient a form. It is an admirable compilation, distinguished by the good taste which has been shown in all the publications of the Messrs.
Chambers. It unites the useful and the entertaining. We hope its circulation here will be large enough to supply, to a good extent, the want of a similar and immortal work which has so long been too sparsely circulated.

This work can be sent by mail to any part of the country. A direct remittance to the publishers of Six Dollars will pay for the entire work. This liberal discount for advance pay will nearly cover the cost of postage on the work. Those wishing for one or more sample numbers can remit them accordingly.
Booksellers and Agents supplied on the most liberal terms.

Poetry.

THE FORSAKEN TO THE FALSE ONE.
BY THOMAS HAYES BAILLY.

I dare thee to forget me!
Go wander where thou wilt;
Thy hand upon the vessel's helm,
Or on the sailor's hit;
Away! thou'rt free! o'er land and sea
Go rush to danger's brink!
But oh, thou canst not fly from thought!
Thy curse will be—to think!
Remember me! remember all My long enduring love.
That linked itself to perily:
The virtue and the dove!
I leave thee once I shall need,
I leave thee once I shall need,
But clung to thee confidently;
Thy curse shall be—to think!
Then go! that thought will render thee
A dastard in the fight;
That thought, when thou art tempest tost,
Will fight thee with affright!
In some wild dungen may't thou lie,
And, counting each cold link
That binds thee to captivity,
Thy curse shall be—to think!
Go seek the merry banquet hall,
Where yonger maidens bloom,
The thought of me shall make thee there Endure a deeper gloom!
That thought shall turn the festive cup
To poison while thou drink,
And while false smiles are on thy cheek,
Thy curse will be—to think!

Forget me! false one, hope I not!
When misaleurs touch the string,
The memory of other days
Will grieve thee while they sing;
The sighs used to love will make Thy coward conscience shrink, Aye, every note will have its sting,
Thy curse will be—to think!

Forget me! No, that shall not be!
I'll haunt thee in thy sleep,
In dreams thou'lt cling to stony rocks
That o'erhang the deep;
Thou'lt shrink for aid! my sleazy arm
Shall haul thee from the brink,
And when thou wak'st in wild dismay,
Thy curse will be—to think!

CODDEN'S HERESIES.

METED IN CHURCHES.
(CONCLUDED FROM OUR LAST.)

It is a sort of coasting trade. Our ships are at home when they get to the colonies.
We do not want any ships to protect our trade with the United States, which is a colony broke loose; and we should bless our stars that did break loose; they never would have been such a customer to us if the aristocracy of England had had that pleasant field of pasture for their younger sons. You do not want a ship of war to protect your trade with the United States, and last year you exported there £10,000, 000 worth of your produce—two or three millions more than you exported to all your colonies together, with the exception of the East Indies. You have a surplus of the name of the colony was lost in a loud burst of applause. Sir William Molesworth, in that admirable saying in your forces there, you might save two millions per annum—a saving which would far more than cover what I propose to take off the armaments of 1835. But, gentlemen, you have to make up your minds to one thing,
that you cannot afford all this waste.—
Now, it is not a matter of choice with you,
I tell you, you are spending too much money as a nation. I tell you, it is merely

I tell you, you are spending too much money as a nation. I tell you, it is merely
the name of the colony was lost in a loud
burst of applause. Sir William Moles-
worth, in that admirable saying in your
forces there, you might save two millions
per annum—a saving which would far more than cover what I propose to take off the armaments of 1835. But, gentlemen, you
have to make up your minds to one thing,
Now, it is not a matter of choice with you,
I tell you, you are spending too much money as a nation. I tell you, it is merely
the name of the colony was lost in a loud
