WEST HURON.

Glorious Gathering on Tuesday.

M. C. Cameron for the Commons—Tel. Res. for the Local Legislature—Their return a Foregone Conclusion.

The Reformers of West Huron turned out in tremendous force on Tuesday.
We doubt if as large and enthusiastic a gathering of truly representative men has ever been seen in this section. Every municipality sent its full quota of delegates, and from distant townships old and well-tried Reformers were there to back up the regular delegates in their good work. The sister town of Clinton nearly sent ten men over and above its allotted number of delegates, and nearly every municipality could have been doubly represented on the floor, had the good men and true who accompanied the delegates a place at the front seats.

NO BALLOTS WERE NEEDED.
The greatest unanimity prevailed, and every man seemed to be of one mind and purpose. Every motion made was carried unanimously.

Chas. Girvin, Esq., Reeve of West Wawanosh, occupied the chair, and all the officers of the association were present. The following were the delegates:

Immediately after the roll call, the nomination of a candidate to represent West Huron in the Commons was proceeded with.

On motion of Dr. Worthington, of Clinton, seconded by Joseph Griffin, Deputy-Reeve of Ashfield, M. C. CAM-ERON, of Goderich, received the unanimously nominated, amidst loud and prolonged cheering.

A deputation consisting of Col. Ross, M. P. E., Mr. J. T. Wilkie, Mr. D. A.
Forrester, Mayor of Clinton, Mr. Mal-lough and Mr. J. Griffin, of Ashfield, and Dr. Worthington, was then appointed to wait upon Mr. Cameron and tender him the unanimous nomination.

During the absence of the deputation, it was moved by R. Harrison, of Ashfield, seconded by John Moseley, of Goderich, that Col. A. M. ROSS be the candidate for West Huron in the Local Legislature. The motion was carried with great cheering.

On the arrival of Mr. Cameron, the large assemblage rose as one man, and three times thrice "tiger" pealed from every throat. It was a grand ovation.

The chairman then again notified Mr.
Cameron of the action of the Convention, and again the members cheered.

Mr. Cameron, in reply, said he felt different on this occasion than at any other of the five or six times upon which he had received a nomination. He was almost at a loss as to what line of action he should adopt. Although a resident of Goderich he had long been identified with South Huron. When he left Ottawa he had his mind made up not to take either riding of Huron. Of course South Huron was now a tolerably safe riding. (Cheers and laughter.) In old times he liked a fight. He at one time refused the nomination in Centre Huron, but refused it to go down to South Huron, where under the shade of a spreading beech-tree in 1872 the first Reform convention was held in that gerrymandered constituency. (Cheers.) He then thought it a forlorn hope, for he was in an apparent minority of 187, but with vigor and energy, and supported by an enthusiastic crowd (but not, he added, more enthusiastic than this convention) he won the battle by a majority of 84. (Applause.) If he accepted the nomination for West Huron, victory would crown their banner. He was not the only man of the 23,000 people of West Huron, who would carry the riding. There were others who could do it in the interest of good Government. But he had been urged by many of his political friends, and many who formerly had not been his political friends, to run for West Huron. On this very day he had been met by a dozen Conservatives who said that if he ran, they would poll their votes for a Reformer for the first time in their life. (Cheers.) He had an ever living and abiding faith in the honor and integrity of the people, and although in a seeming minority of 117 he had no doubt but that victory would perch upon their banner. (Applause.) We are entering upon a contest that will need every vote; but we can appeal to every independent man to lay aside every prejudice, and vote for honest government.

Down at Ottawa strange things are done.
A majority never contained less independent and more corrupt men than that which ranged themselves with the Government during the last four years. If some of the things done there had been done in other countries, there would have been no quiet meeting in protest such as this, "but drawn bayonets." (Hear, hear.) But we are a long suffering people. A constituent had written to him recently that this was the time for revolution; but the speaker was content to leave it to the people at the polls.
He then pointed out a number of jobs done during the past four years, describing how Joe Whitehead had been bled by unscrupulous Tory journalists to the extent of $33,000, and been recouped by the Government. He also instanced the Moyan claim, and the Yankee Clarke's $25,000 bribe for getting an American fellow citizen to turn traitor to his country in the Halifax Fishery Award matter. Sir Charles Tupper was known as the "Great Stretcher." His friends called Sir Charles a great statesman.
This reminded him that Napoleon once said that Talleyrand was a great state-man because he was a great liar. (Laughter.) He referred to the Hollow street office transaction, the car wheel job, and the two Underdonk jobs, in all of which Sir Charles Tupper had been shamefully concerned. He also mentioned the Northern Railway affair, and showed up the Girouard tie claim, and said that in these and other transactions the Government had acted the part of public thieves.
Are you prepared to give them your confidence? (No, No, No!) He was persuaded that these men, some of whom have been decorated by the Queen, will be swept from power with the force and suddenness of a whirlwind. (Great cheering.) Referring to the expenditures he showed that while in 1873 the expenditure was $23,500,000, Sir Leonard attributed the increase to a million in 1878. This year the expenditure is $28,500,000, or $5,000,000 more, three bills adding that extra amount upon us. But the day is coming when we will meet these men and overwhelm them, and they will be buried unwept, unhonored and unsung. (Cheers.) He then alluded to the nepotism of the members of the government, and showed how the Popen, the Tilleys, the Tollers and their near and distant relations fattened at the public crib. Mr. Cameron then stated that he would not have been before the convention had it not been for the gerrymandering. In his fifteen years of Parliamentary experience he knew of no bill which had less excuse.
They gave us four new members, and that was the excuse for breaking up the boundaries of fifty-six constituencies.
Had such a thing been done in the Mar-time provinces, the people there would have been in arms. (Hear, hear.) If the Government returns with a majority of seats, they will not have a majority of the votes of Ontario, but their Ontario supporters will be mainly representatives of an act of Parliament. He showed the hollowness of the representation by population plus, by contrasting the uneven population of a score of constituencies.
He briefly referred to the boundary award, and pointed out that every French member except two voted against the ratification of the Boundary award. He eloquently described the glorious prospect before the Liberal party, and drew forth tremendous applause. He appreciated the nomination. South Huron had a claim upon him and he on it; but he would not run for South Huron, and if he did not run for West Huron he would not run at all. (Great cheering, the audience rising to their feet in their enthusiasm.) After he had consulted the people of South Huron, and got the consent, he would stand for the West. (Cheers.) He had been asked to run in North Middlesex. A prominent Conservative in Biddulph had written him saying that he would support him, and that he (Cameron) could turn Biddulph's Conservative majority of 250 into a Reform majority of 100. (Applause.) But he would stand by West Huron, if the people of the South consented. A candidate cannot win alone; every man must support the banner of the Reform and good Government and it will not be furl'd until after five o'clock on the 20th of June, when it will float over M. C.
Cameron as West Huron's member. The speaker concluded amidst tremendous applause.

Col. Ross was then formally tendered the nomination for the Local Legislature and was received with loud cheers as he

meeting was to get the consent of Mr.
M. C. Cameron to contest West Huron at the coming election. In this they had been successful, and the great enthusiasm exhibited by this meeting proved conclusively that the best man in the riding had received the unanimous nomination. Mr. Cameron had claims upon South Huron, and South Huron had claims upon Mr. Cameron, and if the matter could be arranged, Mr. Cameron was pledged to accept the nomination for West Huron. For Mr. Cameron to accept a nomination meant the securing of victory at the polls. (Hear, hear.) Now was the time for a bold front to be shown. It was true the Reform leaders had faced heavy odds in the House; they had a majority against them so large that it could not be broken, and though they charged on the scattered columns time and again, despite their valor they had been forced back.
Then it was that the Reform leaders made up their minds that the final appeal must be made to the people. But at the eleventh hour the gerrymandering bill was brought down by Sir John, the effort is made to stifle public opinion, the "Grits are bled," and an attempt an active attempt it would prove—it made to legislate some of the best of the Liberal politicians from public life. Sir John had packed the jury by act of parliament in his own interest, regardless of the fact that no member should have a voice or vote in parliament on a question in which he was personally interested. Most of the Tory members of Ontario were personally interested in the gerrymandering Act, yet they voted and spoke, in favor of it.
But, notwithstanding the carrying up of the constituencies, he firmly believed Right and Truth would prevail, and deceit and trickery would meet its own reward. The corrupt acts of the present Government enumerated by Mr. Cameron were only a moiety of their iniquities, and the abilities of Sir John Macdonald—and he had abilities—could not compensate for his wrong-doing.
Sir John Macdonald, although a clever man was not a good man, and no Conservative in Canada would say he was a good man. But even Conservatives admitted that Edward Blake was a good and true, as well as a clever man, an orator and a statesman. (Hear, hear.) Hon. Oliver Mowat had been ridiculed for being a "Christian statesman"—and he was proud to say that he was a Christian statesman and an honorable, upright, God-fearing gentleman in every sense the term implied. (Cheers.) The N. E. had snatched a verdict from the Reformers in 1878, but they could now go to the country on living issues such as provincial rights, the maintenance of our provincial boundaries, and the restitution of
