

IT ENDS PAIN!

Have you a sore place? Have you any skin disease, old sore or cystic wound, that has defied all efforts at healing? If so, apply Zam-Buk and prove its merits.

A Woman's Message to Women.

Mrs. James Elsworth, 902 Selkirk Ave., Winnipeg, Man., says:—"Four and a half years ago ulcers started on my left ankle, and spread until the top of my foot and limb, to the knee, was well-nigh covered. I used ointment after ointment, until everything I knew of had been tried, but I received little or no benefit. I was laid up in bed for a long time, and had no rest or sleep, night after night, from the acute pain and irritation.

"I consulted doctors, until I had taken treatment from at least five. After using their ointments and preparations until I was positive I could get no cure, I almost gave up in despair. I was next persuaded to try a course of treatment supplied by a company operating in this city, and as much as thirteen dollars and a half in one week for ointments, which proved of no use whatever.

"One day a sample of Zam-Buk was left at the house. This seemed to soothe the pain, almost instantly, and encouraged me to get a supply from the druggist and give it a fair trial. Zam-Buk had a wonderful effect in a very short time. The irritation and the pain were quickly relieved, and gradually the ulcers were cleared of all poisonous matter. The discharge then ceased, and the ulcers began to show signs of healing. I kept on using Zam-Buk until every ulcer had been completely healed."

CHAPTER IV.

GOLDIE'S SECRET.

There was a mournful accent in her once happy, ringing voice, which did not escape the notice of the proud, handsome Belle, whose heart, nevertheless, failed to thrill with a thought of pity or tenderness. She only closed her lips firmly, and whispered, under her breath:

"Her punishment has begun. Let her suffer."

"What were you saying, Belle? I did not hear."

"I say that you are a fool for your pains, when you went to the post office upon such a night as this for a letter from Frank Whitney."

Goldie glanced into her sister's face with pained surprise, then replied, in a tone scarcely above a whisper:

"But he will never write again. He will not remember you long."

"Oh, please, Belle, do not say such cruel things! Frank will not forget me. When he gets my last letter he must come home at once," murmured the poor child, who was scarcely conscious of her words, so strong was her desire to shield her loved Frank from the imputation of inconstancy, and assure her own heart that he must be true.

"Why should he come home when he receives your letter? I thought he was not coming home for three years," answered Belle, looking with unwavering glance straight into Goldie's truthful eyes.

Even in the moonlight Belle saw the painful flush creeping from Goldie's cheeks up to her transparent temples, and even to the roots of her golden hair, while her small hands clasped more tightly the shawl in which she was wrapped.

She made no answer to Belle's words until Belle shook her roughly by the arm, and hissed:

"Why should he come home when he gets your last letter? What did you write?"

"I wrote that he must come—that I should die if he did not return to me. And he will! Oh, I know he will! He must—he will come!" moaned Goldie, rocking her beautiful form to and fro, with clasped hands held closely to her breast.

"You act well!" sneered Belle.

"Oh, Belle! you gave him up to me—or me to him, I don't know, which—and—and, oh Belle! if you would love me now, I might tell you all."

"I know all without your telling," was the cold reply.

Goldie turned a frightened glance toward her sister, and asked timidly:

"Who told you, Belle?"

"Common sense tells me that you would never conduct yourself in this way without a cause. Ah! Goldie, I know your secret," she said, as she bent forward and whispered in Goldie's ear for half a moment.

Goldie shivered as with a sudden chill, and hid her face in the folds of her shawl.

Belle waited but an instant for a reply, then demanded:

"Tell me the truth. Is it so or not?"

"Oh, Belle! We were married—a secret marriage. What shall I do? Help me, dear Sister Belle, and do not kill me with your cruel glance!"

"Married! A secret marriage! sneered Belle. "Then, of course, you have a certificate?"

"No; Frank has got that. And I cannot even tell the place we were married," replied poor little Goldie, sobbing hysterically.

"I thought so! What a wise girl—to get married, and forget where! What shall I do?"

For a moment Belle Mellen turned her cruel eyes away from Goldie's face. She looked over the wide sweep of hill and dale. In the moonlight she saw the very places where she had strolled with Frank Whitney when he was her promised husband—when he was all the world to her. A bitter memory swept over her heart, and she said:

"You should have thought of this before, Goldie. I can do nothing, but I will speak to mother of your situation."

The drooping little figure slid down from the low chair and knelt at Belle's feet, while her trembling voice wailed:

"For sweet pity's sake, oh, Belle! I beg of you to spare mother. I will go away! Mother shall never know!"

Nerves Are Exhausted

And nervous prostration or paralysis is creeping steadily upon you.

You hear of people suddenly falling victims of nervous prostration or some form of paralysis. But when you get all the facts of the case you find that they have had months or years of warning.

There has been frequent attacks of nervous headache. Digestion has failed. They have been irritable, easily worried and excited and have found memory and concentration failing.

Had they but known that these symptoms tell of exhausted nerves or had they realized their danger they would have restored the feeble, wasted nerves by use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great restorative treatment cures by forming new, rich blood and by rebuilding the wasted nerve cells. No medicine is more certain to prove of lasting benefit to the system. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50; at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Goldie threw up the ash and called:

"Have you a letter for me, Tim?"

Tim rushed in the door, and the question was repeated.

"Sorry to disappoint you, Miss Goldie, but there wasn't no letters for nobody, an' I forgot to ask the postmaster when there would be one. But I guess he'll have one for ye next time—he looked so he might," answered Tim, who was sorry to disappoint Goldie, and wished to afford her all the consolation he could.

At this moment Mrs. Mellen's pleasant voice sounded from the foot of the stairs.

"Girls, girls, come down! Tim's come, and you'll catch your death sitting up there in the cold. Come, Belle; come, Goldie!"

Belle went downstairs, but Goldie undressed, and crept sobbing into bed. Later in the evening, Mrs. Mellen entered her room, to find her asleep, with cheeks and lip burning hot and scarlet.

She bent over her child, and touched her lips to her scarlet cheek. Starting back, she exclaimed:

"What can be the matter with Goldie? I must call father!"

The words aroused Goldie.

"Mother, dear!" she exclaimed, throwing her arms about her mother's neck. "Mother, dear! You will always love Goldie, and not blame her? Say 'Yes, mother.'"

"To be sure I shall always love you, Goldie. But lie down, now, and try to get some more sleep. I'll be up again in a few minutes with your hot ginger tea. You've got a bad cold."

With a tender, motherly embrace, Mrs. Mellen laid the slight form of her daughter back upon the pillow. Was it a presentiment of the gloom to come that caused her to kiss her brow and whisper:

"God bless and keep you always, my darling!"
