CHAPTER IV.

Whilst the numbers attending the garden party were not as large as could be desired, there was one encouraging feature about it which in a sense redeemed the situation. We noticed that the men of the place were not on the grounds, nor were there any from the neighbouring settlements; but on enquiry we learned that a very marked improvement had taken place in the fishery, and on that particular day, all the boats had done exceptionally well, and that because of their success the men were delayed stowing away their catch. This was good news, and we trust the improvement will continue all along the coast. We met Mr. Devereaux, the popular merchant of Ferryland, and he questioned him about the fishery of that place as well as other parts of the shore, and he told us it was very satisfactory. We asked him if we would be safe in stating in the press that the fishery of Ferryland had improved and was then considered good, and he assured us that we would be safe in doing so. We next interviewed Doctor Freebairn, of Ferryland, and he reported to us the same gratifying news, and the good doctor added what was being caught was fairly well divided amongst the different classes of fishermen. We saw several people on the grounds whom we had met five years past, among them being Doctor Chisholm, of Manuels; Rev. Father O'Brien, of Tor's Cove; Rev. Father Rawlins, of Torbay, who is interested in the parish of Caplin Bay. We had the honour of an introduction to the latter rev. gentleman, but did not have the honour of being introduced to the rev. pastor of Tor's Cove. While at dinner the study of the different people at the tables was as interesting as it was varied. The characteristics of the ladies in attendance presented quite a varied phase of natural study. Opposite our party there sat a gentleman of the place, who, while very civil, was certainly very inquisitive, but at the same time he was not unpleasant; he seemed to be taken up with the conversation which passed between our own particular party, and in a short time he was taking part in it himself; but his attitude was that of the doubter, and he seemed to think, and in fact he told us in plain words, that we did not stand in the same relation to each other that we assumed. It was amusing to listen to the gentleman and still more amusing to notice with what interest he listened to our words. We found the evening repeat very delicious, and quite refreshing, but our fellow guest at the opposite side of the table greatly increased its pleasantness. "He certainly took us in," nor will we soon forget the man and two ladies, which so aroused his interest. We afterwards met him on the field, and had a conversation with him, and told him some of the things he wished to find out and then we bade him goodbye with a hearty shake hands.

While within the tent, a boy of the place was standing outside, when one of the guests called him and presented him with a very nice pocket knife. The little boy seemed greatly pleased, and was soon surrounded by his companions to whom he gleefully showed the knife and pointed to the man in the tent who was the donor of the gift. These incidents perhaps are trivial in a way, but after all they make up the sum total of human life, and, thus illustrate the different characteristics of the sons of man. The ladies were busy serving their guests, the more youthful element was absorbed in the dance, the older men strolled around, and the boys and girls found their places, and the man at the table made a study of the strangers who were near him. But then as we have already said, it is the way of human nature, and when all taken together it gives us the sum which we call character. Marked the world over seems to be alike, and every man, and every race of men, has certain peculiarities which comprise the diversities of life. These characteristics are very opposite in many ways, and may sometimes tend to conflict, but when properly directed and understood they result in harmony. To us, the whole party and surroundings harmonized, and each incident afforded interest, and as we left the field, and joined the train we were fully satisfied that the good people of Caplin Bay, had done their duty for their patrons, and that they had given them a good reception; and judging from the opinion of those who attended the party, there was entire satisfaction on both sides.

The weather conditions of the day were ideal for a holiday, and in this respect the ladies of Caplin Bay are to be congratulated. The bright sunshine, and the cooling sea-breeze, and the happy people, and the surrounding air of independence were all conducive to the spirit of good-will which prevailed. It was a typical Newfoundland scene in every sense of the phrase.

Salvia Hair Tonic Makes Hair Grow

Ladies should have radiant hair. There are thousands of women with thin, faded, characterless hair, who do not try to improve it. In England and Paris women take pride in having beautiful hair. Every Canadian woman can have lustrous and luxuriant hair by using SALVIA, the Great American Sage Hair Tonic. SALVIA is a beautiful, pleasant, non-sticky Hair Tonic. 50c. a bottle.

Conan Doyle.

We ought to give ovation to Arthur Conan Doyle, who is spending his vacation on Freedom's sacred soil; beneath the stately banner, he's taking notes, they say, and in his sprightly manner he'll write us up some day. At home he has been knighted, with Britain's chosen few, and we should be delighted to do him honour, too. To every farthest distance extends his well earned fame, for he has made existence a better, brighter game. How every reader glories in good old Sherlock Holmes, in all Sir Arthur's stories, his essays and his poems! In letters he's the leader; romancer, bard and sage, who never bored a reader, or wrote a dreary page! They caught old Homer nodding, in olden times, it seems; they had to do some prodding to rouse him from his dreams; and almost every author has days when he can't write much better than a Goth or a Vandal who is tight, but Doyle has never written a line devoid of grace, or sent me off a-hitten! the Begonia for a brace! We don't appreciate him or rightly gage his worth; we haven't learned to rate him with giants of the earth, but when he has been planted for fifty years, by Jung, posterity, enchanted, will say he was a king.

Special to the Evening Telegram.

LONDON, July 13. While Unionists in the North of Ireland to-day are giving expression of their determination never to countenance Home Rule, the Cabinet met in session to devise steps to prevent civil war. Asquith presided, and it is reported a new programme for the pacification of Ulster has been outlined.

DUMBERG, Ireland, July 13. The orangemen's celebration to-day culminated in a scene of enthusiasm around the platform where Sir Edward Carson, with Bible in hand, pledged the covenanters never to surrender to coercion, to remain loyal to the union and never to waver their support to their leaders in the fight against Home Rule. Sir Edward's speech, which evoked enthusiasm, served notice on the British Government, that unless they were prepared to leave Ulster alone they would very shortly find the Ulster men recognizing no Government except the Provisional Government of Ulster. He said he had been given authority to act, and is necessary to exercise his powers without regard to consequences to himself. Ulster men were not going to give way, they were bound to fight because God would defend the right. Carson offered the Government the alternative of giving Ulster a clean cut out of Home Rule or coming to fight the Ulster men. These are the only possible alternatives. Ulster, he concluded was claiming only justice and if it did not get it from the Government it would take it for itself.

Lord Londonderry, at Inniskillen, and Walter Hume Long, at Carragh, made speeches similar to other demonstrations of Ulster men. No disorder was reported from any point up to a late hour to-night. Rival Nationalist and Orange demonstrations at Glendemonagh, reached the stage of jeering at each other, and for a few moments it looked like trouble.

CHAROLLES, France, July 13. Two were killed and ten wounded in a desperate battle between two tribes of Gypsies, who fought on the Banks of the Loire, to-day. It was the outcome of a long-standing feud.

By reason of the changing shape when in motion this tire cleans itself of all mud and slime.

each tribe having sworn to exterminate the other the first opportunity. The two bands, aggregating 120, armed with guns, revolvers, axes and knives, fell upon each other savagely, the women as determined as the men. By the time the police arrived in sufficient force to separate the combatants, the ground was strewn with dead and wounded.

LIVERPOOL, July 13. A strike started to-day among the Mersey Dock employees, with the object of enforcing recognition of workmen's unions and bringing about the establishment of joint boards of workmen and employers to deal with disputes. While the strike is not general, many power stations are rendered idle and several liners are imprisoned at the docks owing to the impossibility of opening the gates.

VERA CRUZ, July 13. To save his country from the horrors of civil war and his capital from capture and perhaps being sacked by the victorious army, Huerta intends to resign the Provisional Presidency and leave Mexico. Huerta will surrender the Government to Francisco Carbajal, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, who will in turn step aside when the time comes.

NEW YORK, July 13. The first hot Sunday for the summer, drew thousands of people to the water side for relief, and ten drownings have been reported to the police during to-day and night.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 13. Nearly 20,000 of the 45,000 coal miners of Ohio, will go back to work this week, as a result of the ratification of a new wage rate by the Convention of United Mine Workers held in No. 6 district on Saturday. The scale provides payment at the rate of 47 and 67.6 cents per ton respectively.

LONDON, July 13. A bomb was discovered last night near the famous old Church of St. John the Evangelist, Westminster. A woman named Annie Bell, who figured several times in militant activities, was arrested.

SHENANDOAH, Iowa, July 13. Following the hottest day for the year, a tornado struck Shenandoah last night. Trees were uprooted, scores of roofs were torn off, a blacksmith's shop upset, and the cupola torn off the Congregational Church. A large stone from the Catholic Church crashed into the street.

MONTREAL, July 13. "We shall proceed immediately with our action against the former owners of the Stordstad for $2,000,000 for loss of the Empress of Ireland," declared A. R. Holden, K.C., Solicitor for the C.P.R., this afternoon. "The action will be heard in the Admiralty Court in this city, in September next," said Holden. The money paid by the Prudential Trust Company amounting to $175,000, has been paid into court, all of which will be laid claim to on behalf of our clients, continued the lawyer, who further says that the unanimous finding of the commissioners shows the C.P.R. is not liable for damages to relatives of the drowned persons, or to injured passengers.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?
