He took in every detail of her toilet-all her exquisite loveliness in those few, brief moments, during which he stood bowing before her, and exchanged polite greetings.

"She is like the matchless calla lily," he said to himself, "as pure, as stately, as perfect. I do not wonder now at Wil's rhapsodies, or that he lost his heart when he saw her. But I wish her name was not Elaine-I never liked it; though if this lily-maid of Astolat was one-half so fair, I doubt if Queen Guinevere, even though she were called the 'pearl of beauty,' could 'hold a candle to her'-to quote a common phrase; and Lancelot, that flower of bravery, made the greatest mistake of his life when he turned the cold shoulder to her pleading. Who could look upon such beauty unmoved? It is not in human nature. Mr. Paxton will make our circle complete," Lady Elaine said, turning, with smile, and a slight blush, from his admiring eyes to speak to Wil.

That smile disclosed the prettiest teeth-small, white, even; and in vivid contrast to the sweet, scarlet lips.
Philip Paxton bowed his apprecia-

A few words more of introduction are necessary in order to make the reader understand more thoroughly what the main characters of our story are like.

BOWEL TROUBLES.

Dr. Radway,—For 30 years we have been using your medicines (Ready Relief and Pills), always getting the desired result, and we can truly say that they are worth ten times their weight in gold. Especially so in a climate like ours, where all kinds of fevers are raging the year round, and where bowel troubles, such as dysentery, are epidemic. I have converted hundreds of families to the use of your remedies, and now they would no more be without them than their family Bible. I am now 73 years old, hale and hearty, and would like your advice regarding my hearing, that has been troubling me lately, etc., etc.

At Jersey City—The game between Jersey City and Baltimore today was declared forfeited to Baltimore 9 to 0 by Umpire Latham in the Baltimore's half of the eighth inning. The crowd attempted to mob Latham, but the police protected him. The trouble began when McCreedy opened the eighth inning with a hit, which Joseph Bean jumped into the air and caught with one hand, juggled it, but retained the ball as he fell to the ground. Latham refused to allow the catch, declaring McCreedy safe. When Capt. Bean protested Latham ordered him to the bench, and before Bean reached there declared the game forfeited.
