Tuc Velos, which left here for Hadding ton Island a week ago yesterday with the barge Pilot in two, for a load of stone for the new government buildings, returned to port Sunday evening with no cargo. As passengers she took up to the quarry Contractor F. Adams and sub-contractor Tulloch, who oversees the quarrying. Neither gentlemen returned, and in their absence the cause of the tug's inability to secure the stone she went for has yet to be explained. When the teamer arrived at Haddington Island the oylinder of the engine used in the quarry had disappeared, and the work of loading the Pilot could not be proceeded with. Apart from this there was, it is said, trouble arising out of differences between the two contractors, which probbetween the two contractors, which probably will be heard of later. Mr. Jole, an employe of Mr. Tullooh, came down on a special trip of the Velos for the express purpose, it is said, of taking legal advice. She returned north at 11 c'clock last night with Mr. Jole, and will, it is expected, return in about a week with a load of stone.
