The amphitheatre is in about its old shape : a covered platform at the west end, seats down the centre, and galleries at either side. Most of the audience, however, preferred to stand. A number of prominent conservatives were seated on the platform.
J. Ick Evans called order. He said : Fellow workingmen and brothers of the workingmen's union, we have again met here, not for the purpose of defending a government, but for defending the people's policy. I now declare this amphitheatre open for the discussion of the people's policy, the N.P. I have pleasure in intro-ducing to you Sir John A. Macdonald. A voice—The king of Canada. Sir John Macdonald was received with loud cheers. He said that when he stood in this place and saw the vast crowd, he thought he must be a regular old Rip Van Winkle who had been sleeping for three years and that he now came and found the same place, the same crowd, the same en-thusiasm, as be had met with on the same thusiasm, as be had met with on the same same place, the same crowd, the same en-thusiasm, as he had met with on the same ground in 1878. [Cheers.] A voice says there is a larger crowd, and he says right, for Toronto has grown, thanks to the N.P.; the people had better-looking hats, and more puoney, and he was happy to say he Blake who was a good conity lawyer, but the people had better-looking hats, and more money, and he was happy to say he himself was none the worse of three years' salary. He was happy to come back and ind this enthusiasm, the feeling of hope and certainty in the future. Looking back they could remember 1878 as a time of denression of sinking hearts. Looking back they could remember 1878 as a time of depression, of sinking hearts, empty pockets and empty larders, but now thanks to the support he had received from the people, he had been able to carry out the N. P. to a successful completion and instead of uncertain hope they saw people contented and happy, and Canada standing in the front rank of the nations of the earth in the matter of credit. [Cheers.] It was to the workingmen of Toronto that they in the front rank of the haddown. It was in the matter of credit. Mr. Mackenzie in 1877 put in the mouth of the governor in the policy he advocated, that there would be no readjustment of the tariff, that it was be no readjustment of the tariff, that it was a mere political dodge—yet now that three vears had passed over their heads he could ask the workingmen, who had witnessed the change in the circumstances of the ask the workingmen, who had witnessed the change in the circumstances of the country, to say whether their promises had ment were destroying not been carried out, whether the tariff they had expected had not been carried out, in disallowing the streams bill. The gov-ernment depends for its existence on the whether the industries he had advocated had not been encouraged, and support of memoers from the provinces, and do you think all these members would allow provincial rights to be interfered with. The great majority of them sup-ported the government's satisfies whether instead of despair and poverty there was not activity in every branch of there was not activity in every branch of the trade. It was true that they were yet in the infancy of the prosperity they had established. These things could not be done in a hurry. You can't plant the seed to-day and reap the food to-morrow, but they had sown the seed and they were sure of which ever out the certainty of making ported the government's action. There were more bills disallowed by Mr. Maekenzie in one parliament than by the con-servatives in all their terms. He had three objections to the streams bill: (1) It interfered with private rights : (2) it was retro-active ; (3) it interfered with a case before of a rich crop and the certainty of making Canada a great country. But they had not the courts. In disallowing the act they had merely followed word for word the rened maturity. And why ? Bevet reac cause we had a factious opposition, an un-scrupulons opposition, an unpatriolic oppo-sition, who had told capitalists that there solution of Mr. Mackenzie's government in disallowing 'n act of the Prince Edward Island iegislature. was no use in investing their money in manufactories, because the present govern-THE GERRYMANDER. Capital that had been gained by hoarding, by saving, by industry, would not embark in uncertainties, and less than four weeks ago Mr. Mackenzie had announced He asked his friends not to be over-confident or surpine ; if they did, an active confident or surpine; if they did, an active minority might capture their position. Money would be spent to beat the con-servatives. Of all things they should avoid the responsibility of changing a policy that had made the country prosperous. He had been long in the service of the country and had committed many errors but he had always acted to the best of his judgment and di what he thought was in the interest that protection was a national folly, a na-tional crime, and Sir Richard Cartwright had said that protection was legalized robbery. Capit-lists were thus afraid to invest their is money in Canada. to invest their is money in Canada. Mr. Blake had asked why did the government dissolve the house and go to the country. He (the speaker) would somer have kept his position and drawn $12,000 salary for eighteen months services, but and did what he thought was in the interest of his beloved country. [Cheers.] Mr. A. W. He had no doubt that they would stand by the N.P., Mr. John O'Donohoe said he had left the reform party because it was in the interest of the country that the N. P. should be and that it would be the policy for the next five years. The only thing wanted to bring in capital from the United States, from England, France and Germany was to know whether this country is of the same mind with regard to the N. P. that it was in 1878. [Cheers.] If the N. P. was confirmed then he could make way for younger men, who would carry out that policy. At the end of five years the capitalists will be so strong and bound together, and the workingmen so and both capital and labor bound together by a common interest that it would be im-possible to reverse the N. The governor-general is rich and draws a salary of $50,000 a year, and the Princess Louise has an income of $80,000 a year from the revenues of the British crown, but there is neither magnifi-cence nor social refinement enough to satisfy her in her surroundings in the Dominion. Life in Canada in summer is delightful, and it is intimated that not many weeks after it is intimated that not many weeks after the Sarmatian lands her at Quebec or Mon-treal a party of her friends will join her for the season, and it is even possible that the Prince of Wales will make a trip across the tlantic before next winter. THE ÆTNA LIFE INSURANCE CO'Y. of Hartford, Conn., was early in recognizing that a considerable number of Hartford, Conn., was early in recognizing that a considerable number of those seeking insurance desired it upon the most inexpensive plans. With a view of meeting the popular demand it organized a copyrighted system, which combines the utmost cheapness, safety and equity. The plan requires only a minimum rate, and avoids the necessity of taking large premiums for the sake of returning large dividends. It gives all the advantages obtainable mder more expensive policies. It is peculiarly adapted to those who desire to secure the largest amount of insurance at the least possible cost; to those who want immediate protection, but are not ready or able to pay for endowments or other plans more expensive, and for those who wish insurance for a limited time, or for a specific cattle are scarce, but grazing cattle are plenty; particularly in the far west the outlook is favorable.
