remarks. He said that his line of trade, the making of agricultural implements, was interested above all others in the measure. These manufacturers had been in consultation and they had decided that if the act were continued they would be obliged to withdraw their agencies in Manitoba or do a strictly cash business. No one had been more lenient with the farmers of Manitoba than the makers of agricultural implements, and no other class of the mercantile community held more of their who we should say are certainly pushing and the makers of the mercantile community processes. tural implements, and no other class of the mercantile community held more of their paper. J. L. Blaikie, president of the Canada Landed Credit company, said the measure was a very unrighteous piece of legislation and was practically one of confiscation. He had seen a petition from the manufacturers of agricultural implements asking for its disallowance, and he understood that the farmers of Manitoba and the Northwest owed these manufacthe chairman about the constitutionality of the act. He wanted to know if it was onstitutional for people to refuse to pay their debts. Mr. Darling replied that he merely stated what he had heard. He had made several inquiries and he was given to understand that the act came within the scope of a provincial legislature. within the scope of a provincial legislature.

After further discussion Wm. Ince and Mr. Wilkie offered a resolution, which after several amendments came out as

The board having had under consideration the act recently passed by the legislature of Manitoba entitled "An act for the better administration of justice," and more especially the sub-sections of sec. 117, referring to exemptions from seizure, records its unqualified condemiation of such legislation as being: 1. An unjust and unwarrantable interference with existing contracts and the rights of parties, 2. As being legislation of such a character as with the present circumstances of the province, in justice to all parties, should not apply to any contract in existence at the time of passing of the act, and also should only be brought into operation after a reasonable time, so that parties likely to be affected thereby may govern themselves accordingly. 3. Certain in its immediate result seriously to embarrase business transactions of every kind within the province and ultimately greatly to restrict inter-provincial commerce. Wherefore the council of this board is requested to prepare a humble address for immediate presentation to the governor-general-in-council praying for its disallowance.

A deputation, consisting of the president, Wm. Ince, W. H. Beatty and D. R. Wilkie, was appointed to proceed to Ottawa if necessary to further the ends of the memorial.

On visiting the establishment the other day we were really surprised at the improvements effected in the establishment since it came into the hands of the new firm, who we should say are certainly pushing it "for all it is worth." The work alone of showing papers to customers keeps two lady clerks busy most of the time. We may just add that recently this firm gave the interior of the World office a new spring suit, which for style and good effect is much admired by our friends. The firm does besides a wholesale supply business in paints, oils, varnishes, gold leafs, pure white lead, etc., etc. 36
