

I have a dear little grey pony to ride. My brother bought him when he was wild and broke him in. He is quite gentle now and goes very fast. I am thinking of putting him in for the Chilcoten races next year, with one of the boys to ride him. We have eight horses now, but a very valuable one has been lost all summer, and is now running with a wild band, so I doubt if we will ever get her again.

We have had no very cold weather yet, but the nights are chilly, there often being from fifteen to twenty degrees of frost. The ranchers say it is going to be very severe—that means from thirty to forty degrees below zero, and we are not looking forward to it.

I went to the Indian Mission School with Father some time ago. It is a very pretty place, four or five miles away. The Father Superior showed me all over it. He was very funny, and showed me all the clothes the children wear and the material of which they were made. I don't think it is nearly so nice as the Yale Indian School.

I went out shooting two or three times with Father, but we did not have very good luck. Game is very scarce this year, as is everything else. I have been looking after the chickens all summer. We had about fifty, as well as the hens. Everybody has a cow up here, and their own eggs. I have also learned to milk, and like it very much, but I do not always get up in time to do it.

Please give my love to everybody, and, with very much love for yourself, I remain

Your loving pupil,

EILEEN.

Heartsease.

ARCHDEACON PENTREATH'S INSTRUCTION ON MISSIONS.

(From notes taken by a pupil in the Indian School.)

"Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

This was our Lord Jesus Christ's commission to His Apostles when He rose from the dead, and in St. Matthew's Gospel we find these words added "baptising them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." His promise, "Lo I am with you alway even unto the end of the world," further strengthened their commission and comforted them in moments of loneliness or peril, of doubt or disappointment.

This command and this promise belong to us also who are baptised members of Christ's Church on Earth. We owe much to this command; if it had not been given to and obeyed by the Apostles we might never have heard of Jesus. Our Lord's Apostles might have been content to stay in their own land and to preach the good news to their own people only, but having received Christ's command
