HERE AND THERE

The Poet.—"Have you read my last poem?"

She.—"No, only your first."

"You know I only live to make you happy," murmured the young man. "Dear me!" she said, "you oughtn't go to all that trouble."

Dollie.—"Yes, Miss Fethers is a pretty girl, but she doesn't wear very well."

Pollie (kindly).—"I know, but the poor thing wears the best she has, I suppose."

Riding-master.—"Miss Pinkly, your seat is not firm enough."

Miss Pinkly.—"Well (jolt) this (jolt) old (jolt) saddle (jolt) is."

Wife.—"Do you really love me, my pet?"

Husband.—"I adore you, my sweet, and am prepared to give you any proof of the fact not exceeding a hundred francs!"

Prospective tenant.—"I like the top floor best. Why doesn't the fire-escape go lower than the third floor?"

Agent.—"It isn't needed. The first three floors are empty."

"EICHBLAUM vas lookin' thin; vat's de matter?" "He was carrying out de plans of his pee-zness." "How vas dat?" "He represents a reduced figure in men's clodings."

Perdita.—"If you continue much longer to play poker with my father I won't marry you."

Jack Dashing.—"If your father continues to play poker much longer with me, I won't need to."

"You are right in it," remarked the whale to Jonah. "You bet I am in it," was the answer; "and what is more, if I am not out of it in less than a week, I will give you the biggest case of appendicitis on record." The sequel is history.

"I OBJECT, my dear, to your asking that woman to dinner. She's the greatest gossip in town," said Mr. Perkins. "I know that John, but we can't invite the reporters, and I don't know how else to get an account of our dinner in the papers," replied Mrs. Perkins.

"HERE is one faulty passage in your story," said the editor: "'Ha! Villain! I have found you out, have I?' he hissed. Now how could he 'hiss' those words?" "He might have had a hair-lip, sir," replied the gifted young author, rising to the emergency.

Station-master.—"I think some one will get into trouble on account of that train starting three minutes late."

Assistant.—"Why? Any of the passengers kicking?"

Station-master.—"No; but the restaurant man swears he'll make it hot for whoever is responsible."
