

finally, that this subject would be for ever separated from politics or party, and considered and treated as paramount to all factions, and all other questions.

Such representatives have now succeeded to power, and in numbers sufficient, it is hoped, to secure such results, and to inculcate some impression of their own character upon the conduct of public affairs. May they prove able to preserve and administer the great, and rich, and fortunate empire they are called to govern, with prudence, and with justice, and with energy, and with all success!

THE END.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY C. ROWORTH AND SONS, BELL YARD, TEMPLE BAR.