

in the temporal as well as the spiritual affairs of the congregation is well known, but especially so to the members of the Deacons' Court, at whose meetings his attendance was most regular, and his sound and practical advice much valued. He was cut off in the midst of his usefulness, but his works remain. To all the bereaved and afflicted ones connected with us we would tender hearty sympathy, while praying that the lessons of God's providence may be learned by us all.

The whole respectfully submitted.

H. CAMERON,

Clerk of the Deacons' Court.
