fellows' Block last night was limited in size only by the capacity of the room, but the enthusiasm could not. be bounded. All of the delegates were present. Other workers in the party squeezed into the hall, and scores who could not gain admission pervaded the stairway and corridor to hear the speeches and welcome the candidate. It was a splendid gathering representative of every polling sub-division in the six wards. The choice of a standard-bearer for the ensuing provincial drawing in his favor. The colonel accepted the honor, and was tendered an ovation by the entire delegation. Colonel Leys is a native of Ontario, n born in 1839 in the township of Pickering, Province of Ontario. His father was a pioneer settler in that district, who came from the old country early in the century. The colonel remained on the farm until 14 years of age, and then went to Toronto, where he entered the public schools, prior to embarking on a business career. was unanimously voted to the chair, and was received with cheers. Mr. Hobbs thanked his friends for the many favors shown him in the past. About four years ago he accepted, with a certain amount of reluctance, the banner of the Liberal party, and they did him the honor of electing him. (Applause.) He did not look back on his career with regret, and they would receive from him that banner unstained by his record in the house. When he went to Toronto he fully intended to secure for London if possible the normal school. (Cheers.) He found that Peterboro, Woodstock and other places were after it, and the citizens of Peterboro even offered provide the site and erect the building free of cost, if the school was located there. But Mr. Hardy and the government recognized if any man said that the normal school would not be erected in London, he stated what was untrue. (Cheers.) The government intended to proceed with that work at an early date. He could say that the government felt perfectly satisfied that they would be returned to power by a larger majority than they had in the house at dissolution. (Cheers.) They expected to number two to one as compared with the opposition in the next legis-lature. (Cheers.) The P. P. A. cry had almost ceased to be used against the government, and the Patrons were not nearly so strong as in the last election, and these were elements arrayed against the government at that time. The government at that time fought for its life; it would not be nearly so hard to carry these constituencies in the ensuing battle. So far as London was concerned, they should have no trouble in retaining the constituency. (Cheers.) "The young men are with us," said Mr. Hobbs. "It is moon-

Mr. Essery polled nearly as many votes as Mr. Meredith, but the young men registered and government. Enthusiastic Speeches by the but the young men registered and gave us their support." Mr. Hobbs urged that the registration be looked after, and said that if the old and young men stood together they would do the same for the candidate now as they did for him (Mr. Hobbs) at the last election. (Cheers.) Nominations were then called for. The following gentlemen were proposed in quick order: J. B. McKillop, Dr. Cl. T. Campbell, T. S. Hobbs, T. H. Purdom, Geo. C. Gibbons, O.C., J. D. Clarko, Francis I. N. A. Wayer, Little Clarke, Francis Love, ex-Mayor Little, Hume Blake Cronyn, John Cameron, Colonel Leys, ex-Ald. Parnell, Talbot Macbeth and Duncan Stuart. MR. J. B. McKILLOP said he had no doubt the convention would heartily support the nominee who received the majority of votes. There was no reason why the Liberals should not win the election. Mr. Love and president of the Masonic Temple said his name had been mentioned as a candidate for parliamentary honors. He would feel honored if he were the choice of the Liberals, but circumstances compelled him to decline. Mr. Love eulogized Mr. Hume Blake Cronyn, whom he characterized as a 'comer'-a young man of promising talents, deservedly liked by all who knew him. (Cheers.) The gallant and worthy Colonel Leys would also make splendid candidate—(cheers)—and whoever the convention chose would have the speaker's hearty support. (Cheers.)

MR. J. D. CLARKE said there was a time in the history of Liberalism in London when its prospects were dark and dismal, but that day was past, when a dozen men had been named tonight, every one of whom, excepting himself, could carry the Liberal banner to victory. (Applause.) He indorsed the sentiments which claims to the institution—(cheers)—and his good friend and neighbor, Mr. Mr. Love had expressed with regard to Cronyn. For that gentleman, this was but a preliminary "canter." He was assured he had a future before him. (Cheers.) Mr. Clarke urged that the preliminaries of the campaign be attended to, and pointed out the necessity for every man of 21 years of age and upwards, not voting in the municipal elections, going to the registration courts to have his name put on the

MR. HUME BLAKE CRONYN received an ovation on coming forward. They were all thankful, he said, that they belonged to such a party as the Liberal party. To be asked by even a section of that party to represent it was an honor which he deeply felt, and he thanked those who had been kind enough to propose him. Many of the Liberals present were unknown to him. Perhaps he could remedy that before long. Perhaps when he was known better he would not be thought so much of. (Laughter.) Mr. Cronyn wished his supporters to understand there had been no running away on his part-he had decided to leave the field clear for a united effort to win the day. (Cheers.) by her late husband. The Ontario opposition had wasted their own time and not affect one vote, except in favor of the Liberals. Another strong point in didate fought for, and his opponent against, the record of a government which had not been surpassed in wisdom, enterprise, liberality and those virtues which had ever been the attributes of Liberalism. MR. JOHN CAMERON. Mr. John Cameron said anyone might be proud to be a Liberal at a time when this magnificent Dominion was developing with such extraordinary rapidity, and which would, from all appearance continue in the next few years to progress at a rate that had never been hitherto exampled.
