It had been told that Mays was weak on fielding bunts, so it mixed swinks with chops. Mays finally became a little raticled and started walking men. Then Olson, who was Brooklyn's chief weakling in most of the contest, stepped up to the place and put the game on ice with a triple hat scored two men who had been so that sorred two men who had the sorred two men New York, Oct. 15 .- This year5s world will go down into history as one

It is an axiom of beseball that pitching decides a world championship. The series is so short that a manager can depend on his three best pitches for all the work, if need be, and it means so much, in the monetary sense, to the players, that the pitchers can be relied on to give everything that they have.

on to give everything that they have. In this fall's set, the pitching didn't figure so much, because it was so nearly Pitchers Did Not Win. Taken as a whole, the Beston boxmen had a slight margin, but it was not enough, of itself, to have given the team enough, of itself, to have given the victory.

No hurler in the series pitched a better game than Sherrod Smith. Marquard did good work in his first game, and Pfeffer, like Smith, was entitled to a shut-out, so far as his own work was concerned. Team in Existence The small crowd at the inter-city base-ball championship at Broadview athletic Washington, Oct. 14.—It cost C. Hercules Ebbets less than $20,000 to gather together a ball team which will net him a profit of more than $200,000. The Doogers size up as the cheapest collection of ball players in existence; a team made up of cast-offs and men called "never-wuzzers" by other managers. Yet Wilbert Robinson welded this material into such a powerful compact mass that it swept, off its own momentum, to the very crest of the National League. And so, the name of Robinson must be added to the list of "miracle managers." The highest priced ball player in the bodger roster is George Cutshaw, the second baseman. He cost Ebbets $2800. The average price paid for the twenty-two players eligible for rostels.

Ramsey, on the mound for the Royals, did not receive the support he deserved and during the first five innings 10 runs were scored by Hamilton, not a man of the Royals being able to score.

The performance of Georgia Technical School Rugby team against Cumberland at Atlanta, Ga., last Saturday, when they submerged Cumberland under the unprecedented score of 222 points to 0, places these figures in the first place in the files of treak scores in U.S. college football. They displace the hitherto record score of Newberry 159, B.M.I. 0, made in 1913, a non-intercollegiate game, and the intercollegiate record of Florida 144, Southern 0, made also in 1913. Thus the south monopolizes these curiosities of the sport.
