THE SARMER OTHE 'Tis an eld story which my childhood knew, Though full of meaning, fabulous most true— How once a farmer did with Satan league, Though full of meaning, fabulous most true—
How once a farmer did with Satan league,
To till a field on shares: mark the intrigue.
First year, quoth Satan we will sow to grain
This arable field; perchance we may obtain Abundant thrift: what grows above the ground
Shall be my share, and what beneath is found
Take as thy portion. Thus the wily plan
Was wrought, to dupe the unsuspecting man.

Was wrought, to dupe the unsuspecting man. dyshiw.

The labor done, the seasons flew their round, Alas! while Satan filled his stores with grain,

Next year the subtile fiend, with honest air, Said to the farmer, to deal just and fair, What grows above the sod regard as thine— What grows beneath it I accept as mine; And to potatoes we will plant the field: May fortune favor with a plenteous yield. Again the doltish farmer gave assent To Satan's scheme, but only to relent Learning the lesson at the season's round, That all potatoes are grown under ground And Satan, chuckling in his hellish glee, Left him to moralize on equity.

MORAL. Reader, beware! nor tread the dangerous ground Of him who lion-like doth roar around; Nor make him partner in thy mortal strife, Lest he shall seize thy all immortal life.

TERRIBLE CALAMITY AT PITTS FIELD. MASS.

The Boston Journal says :- One of the most terrible catastrophes since the fearful Lawrence, occurred in Pittsfield about noon on Tuesday the 4th inst. The loss of life is happily not so large as at Lawrence, but the amount of property suddenly destroyed must be nearly equal, and the escape of so must be nearly equal, and the escape of so many from serious injury and outright death is almost miraculous. The building which fell was known as "Burbank's Old Block," was erected about fourteen years ago, and was situated upon North street, the principal business thoroughlare of the town.
