Had to Leave School

The Pitiable Story of a Young Girl

Every Mother of a Growing Girl will be Interested in the Story as Told by the Young Lady.

Miss Laura Dumontier is the daughter of a well-to-do farmer in St. Cuthbert, Quebec. The circumstances under which she was forced to discon-Cuthbert, Quebec. The circumstances under which she was forced to discontinue her studies and leave school will be of interest to all mothers of growing girls, and Miss Dumontier consents to make them public for the benefit her experience may be to others. She says: "At the age of twelve I was sent to a convent school in this parish. At that time I was as healthy as any girl of my age. At the end of a couple of years, however, I felt my strength leaving me. My appetite grew poor, and I suffered from severe headaches. I nevertheless continued my studies until October, 1901, when I became very ill and was forced to leave school. The headaches that had bothered me became almost constant. I suffered The headaches that had bothered had became almost constant. I suffered from pains in the back and stomach and the least exertion would leave me almost breathless. A doctor was called in and he said I was suffering a constant of the said I was suffering a sound on the said I was suffering the sai called in and he said I was suffering from anaemia, and was in a very dangerous condition. He treated me until February without the least beneficial result. Then another doctor was called in, but no better results followed his treatment. My parents cial result. Then another doctor was called in, but no better results followed his treatment. My parents were now thoroughly alarmed and two other doctors from St. Barthelemi were called in, and after consultation their verdict was that my trouble had reached an incurable stage. I was greatly disheartened and did not expect to live long when one day one of my friends asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had lost confidence in all medicines, but was willing to try anything that might help me, and my father got me a supply of the pills. When I had used a couple of boxes it was very plain that the pills were doing me good, and after I had taken them a couple of months I was once more enjoying the blessing of good health. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved my life and I gladly give my experience in the hope that it may be of benefit to some other young girls."

No discovery of modern times has proved such a blessing to young girls and women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pils. They act directly on the blood and nerves, invigorate the body, regulate the functions and restore health and strength to the exhausted patient when every effort of the physician proves unavailing. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Remember that no other medicine can take the place of these pills and see that the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Palc People, is on the wrapper around every box.

THE COLOR OF STARS.

They Differ in This as They Do in Bright ness-A Five-Fold Division That Suggests Itself,

The wide difference which there is between star and star as to bright ness is apparent on the very first glance toward the heavens; it re quires a more careful scrutiny to re alize that they differ also in their color, and in the character of their shining. The ancient carried their discrimination of the difference of the brightness of stars so far as to re-cognize six magnitudes, but when it came to the question of color, they hardly noted any difference at all hardly noted any difference at all.
The stars in general were described as yellow, six only being recorded as "fiery." Of these six we should class five as being distinctly orange or red —Antares, Betelgense, Aldebaran, Arcturus and Pollux. The sixth, Simus, is to us an intensely white star, and there have been many discussions as to wictor it has changed. sions as to wiletner it has changed its color in the last 2.000 years, or whether the description given of it—
"fiery red"—is due to some mistake in the record, or whether the excessive scintillation of the star may ac count for it. For, as we see it now when near the horizon, a momentary flash of vivid red fiame shoots out from time to time due to the irregular dispersion of its light in passing through the tremulous atmosphere.

Assuming that the light of any star is partly white and partly colored, we may divide the stars into ored, we may divide the stars into classes, depending entirely upon the depth of tint which they show, and not upon its color. A five-fold division suggests itself, something in the following effect: (1) Pure white, (2) tinted, (3) colored, (4) fully colored, (5) deeply colored. After the question of the depth of tint which the stars show correct the source that such colors. tion of the depth of tint which the stars show, comes the question of the color of that tint. For naked eye stars the more refrangible colors do not come into consideration. The range is from orange red up to yellowish-green, or, possibly, in a single instance—that of Beta Librae—to green. Alpha Lyrae, and possibly one or two other stars, have a distinct bluish tinge, but in general stars not passed as white may be very well scheduled under one of the five following heads: (1) Red yellow, (2) orange, (3) orange yellow, (4) reddish orange, (5) yellowish green. In working upon star colors with the naked eye it is impossible to use any artificial standard of color, but the wide field of view, and the ease and rapidity with which the attention can be turned from one part of the heavens to the other, will much more than make up or this deficient (1). heavens to the other, will much more than make up for this deficiency. The stars must be compared one with another, the estimations of color must be purely relative and the method will be found much the most accurate possible.—E. Walter der, F.R.S.. in Knowledge.

The poet, Walt Whitman, was, as is well known, dependent during most of his life upon the kindness of friends and admirers for support, making little or nothing on his writings. A few years before his death one of his friends called upon him in his little home in Camden, a suburb town of Philadelphia. "Well, Walt," he said, "how goes it this winter? In the tropical northern territory of South Australia travelers need not carry a compass. Nature has provided a living compass for them.
