CARNEGIE'S DICTUM Steel King Says Faithful Employes Sheald

The great secret of success in bus manufacturing, where a small saving in each process means fortune, is a liberal division of profits among the men who help to make them, and the wider distribution the better. There lip latent unsuspected powers in willing men around us which only need appreciation and development to produce surprising results. Money rewards alone will not, however, insure these, for to the most sensitive and ambitious natures there must be the note of sympathy, appreciation. the note of sympathy, appreciation, friendship. Plenty of Whales.

Not for many seasons have I known whales to be so plentiful in the Gulf and Straits. Not only did Captain Blandford, of Greenly Island, tell me that he had been frequently wakened at night by the noise they make in illowing, but three or four people have complained to or four people have complained to me that whales are getting into their traps along shore already. None of these were drowned or captured. When tired of playing in the nets they went away with its pillars, like Samson from the city of his enemics. One man I was talking to told me there is nothing easier while the whale is still flucted by the twine than to get near enough to kill him.

"You've only got to keep close to its nose, sir, and if you have a chisel you can tie it on the boat hook and drive it into it." Oddly enough, none of us expressed none of us expressed any desire to emulate a deed of this kind. Keeping close to the nose of a whale in a flurry is a sensation. I would like to recommend to some of the blase idle rich, who have exhausted the idle rich, who have exhausted the pleasures of ordinary men. In addition to whales we have seen one or two fine large halibut that have been taken on the coast this season, and this, with the return of that best of fish, the real large Labrador herring, has afforded a change of diet quite unusual at this season of diet quite unusual at this season. diet quite unusual at this season the year — Dr. Wilfrid Grenfell, Montreal Witness.

Influences That Affect Careers.

What are the influences which mos What are the influences which most strengly affect a man's career? asks Lally Barnard, in The Globe. Those of his youth, or those of middle age, when he is drawn towards certain people and certain things by his own instinct and reason? Robert Louis Stevenson paid much attention to this problem. He did not live to be what we regard as an old man, but he lived long enough to look at himself in two phases; and I can nowhere find which phase he considered was of supreme importance. Possibly was of supreme importance. Possibly he faced the problem, but he did not solve it. The knowledge of these things comes to us at times through the medium of a most trivial incident, or what we consider a trivial incident in comparison to other events in our lives. There are times when we cease to think and live, and there are periods when living be-comes merely a mental process. Accicomes merely a mental process. Accidents which happen are commonly commented upon as tragedies, but the genuine tragedies are those which human eye never witnesses, when the agony of the human soul is hidden, when the foundation of belief in some other being is shattered, and there is no hope here or hereafter.

To put the brake on the wagon go To put the brake on the wag on going down the hill is a help to the horse, when the wagon is heavily loaded. But what driver would think of applying the brake to a loaded wagon going up hill? If he did, his sensible thorse would probably balk. Many a man is in the condition of pulling a load up hill with the brake set against him. When his stomach is out of order, and the allied organs of ligestion and nutrition impaired in their functions, a friction is set up which has to be overcome in addition to the performance of daily duties. A foul standard makes a foggy brain, and the man with a disordered stomach has often to grope his way through the day's business like a man in a fog. He forgets appointments. Problems seem presented to his mind "wrong end to." This condition is entirely remedied by the use of Dr. Paerces remedied by the use of Dr. Perces Folden Medical Discovery. Heary Watterson on the Money Devil®
The idiosyncrasy of the century from which we have just emerged was "liberty." The idiosyncrasy of the century we are just beginning is "business." The greatest danger before us is not found in the Philippines nor in Cuba nor in Porto Rico; it is to be found in money. This danger is not the relation of money to organized capital nor to organized labor. It is its ever increasing effect upon the moral nature of people, upon the moral sense of the individual man and woman.

Each country has its crowns of glory and crowns of thorns. Tind out Tenry Watterson on the Money Devil*

Each country has its crowns of glory and crowns of thorns. Find out a nation's sins, and you find therein its dangers. What is the matter with America? Is it the race problem of the south? I know so much about that that I can say it is not. I have an unshaken belief in the powers above that makes me think that it will furnish its own solution. Is it the labor question? That, too, will settle itself. No. The real danger has its roots in human nature, is fostered by our peculiar conditions and lies in the effect of money upon the national moral sense. The brains of the country are all engaged in money making alone.

Atone.

It is the money devil we must fear and the money spirit of which we must beware.—Henry Watterson, Editor Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Number Seven, Seven is a very lucky number, and, judging from its frequent use as a great mystical and symbolical number, it was also very popular in days gone by. There are seven days in the week, and the seventh day is kept holy. There are seven deadly sins—pride, covetousness, lust, anger, gluttony, envy and sloth. There are seven virtues—faith, hope, charity, prudence, temperance, chastity and fortitude. The seven champions of Christendom were St. George for England, St. Andrew for Scotland, St. Patrick for Ireland, St. David for Wales, St. Dennis for France, St. James for Spain and St. Anthony for Italy. The World's Tin.

It is an astonishing fact that tin is the most sparingly distributed of all the metals in common use. While the known gold fields of the world cover more than 1,500,000 square miles, the tin fields have an area of less than 12,500 square miles. There are seven tin districts in Europe, producing about 8,300 tons yearly, of which the Cornish mines yield about 8,000 tons, Asia has two ticareas—Hunan, in China, proved by official figures to yield less than 2, 500 tons, and the Straits Settlements and adjacent principalities, yielding 58,000 tons yearly, the richest yield in the world. Africa has no known tin mine, South America only one tin area, Bolivia and Peru yield-ing less than 4,000 tons a year. Aus-tralia contributes about 6,000 tons a

This brought from Sir William a cry of "Silence!" He often had to repeat the definition, and always there followed the applause and the "Silence!" One day the students, in league together, omitted the usual cheer, and caught the Professor finely, for at the close of the sentence he shouted "Silence!" to the silent benches.

Include Live Stock

Diversified farming does not stop at crop grown from the soil, but should include a diversity of live stock. Some good cattle, a few good capacious brood mares, some good breeding hogs, a few or more sheep, goats and fowls of divers sorts should be found on every farm, for the contractors are safety in the they do not interfere or conflict with each other. There is a place for each, and a farm is incomplete with-out a stock of each sort.
