

kicked, and Hamilton caught it and made his mark, and succeeded in kicking a beautiful goal, the ball going just a few feet over the middle of the bar. This seemed to give McGill renewed energy, and they secured another rouge. Toronto secured another rouge. When time was called, the score stood—Toronto 13 points, McGill 6.

In the evening the McGill team were royally entertained by the Torontos, at the Rossin House. The menu and viands were appreciated in a manner which none but football men can understand.

Speeches by Messrs. McLean and Hamilton, the two presidents, and by Messrs. Senkler and Webster, the two captains, who reminded Brockville that she was highly honored in producing such sons ("the manager" also comes from B.)

After the dinner a few of the boys thought that they would rest better at the University residence. The journey on a Toronto street car to the University is said to resemble a long sea voyage.

On Sunday evening all were on board the train for Montreal, quite a number of the Toronto boys being at the station.

On the way home "John" was the centre of an admiring group (of 18), and fought his old campaigns over again in a very graphic manner. One of his true yarns was so well illustrated by tropical fruit, that it will never be effaced from the memory of those who heard it.

Exchanges.

The Dalhousie Gazette is always reliable and readable, and the number at hand is quite up to the usual average.

The Athenaeum, published at Wolfville, N.S., occupies a very high plane, and is conducted with dignity and sense.

The Argosy comes to us from Mount Allison, freighted with sea breezes. It has entered upon its initial number, and invites a free criticism.

The Atlantis, published at the Central University, Kentucky, is an ambitious attempt to be a good paper, with apparently no great source to draw its inspiration from.

The Epsomian is evidently a paper conducted by boys, but it is rich in old traditions, and filled with accounts of the field games that have contributed so largely to England's greatness.

A new element has entered into the editorial sanctum of the University Monthly, of Fredericton, N.B., in the form of a lady editor. Experience enables us to tender congratulations. The editorials of this publication are well written and interesting. The following extract we would commend to the careful consideration of McGill students:—

The necessity of unhesitating support (of the University Monthly) on the part of the students will be recognized by noting the universality of journalism in college communities, and the virtue which this work possesses in moulding the opinion of the outside world, with regard to the general tone and the proficiency of the work of the institution which the journal represents.

The King's College Record is the publication of a denominational institution in Windsor, Nova Scotia, a College which has been in existence for over 100 years. The series of articles on Canadian Poets are indicative of considerable literary ability.

From a careful examination of Exchanges for several years, we have been able to remark that those received from the European institutions did not at all rival their American contemporaries. At present we have reason to modify this belief. We have received from the University of Edinburgh The Student, accompanied by a note, both of which it gives us great pleasure to acknowledge. The Student, in itself, is one of our best exchanges, and is filled with material suggestive of the venerable institution from which it comes. It reveals the universality of student life, and the large class of experiences that are common to students the world over. This is but the second year of its publication, and if wish of ours can avail, it will have a good future. There seems to be a close kinship between McGill and Edinburgh, and not a year passes but some of our graduates are dwelling in the shadow of that great University.

Between the Lectures.

That was a profound report on Epithelial carcinoma, but its value would have been enhanced if one could have but read it.

What an unlucky team McGill has. They have held their own against every club they have encountered, and yet there is not one score in their favor. Who is the Jonah?

We are glad to see that the naturally inherent "contractility of protoplasm"—always so marked in a first year man—has been so far overcome that a first year man responded to the toast of "The Freshmen" at the dinner. What's the matter with the freshmen?

The serious undertaking of photographing the University team has been performed. It was highly amusing to note the studied care with which each man arranged the folds of his jersey, so as to have every line of his manly bosom show in the most taking manner.

The worthy Right Wing was calmly reposing in front, utterly unconscious of the paper rose wreath which Terentius, the Roman, had bedecked his back hair with. He was the only serious man in the group when the photographer offered to exchange it for a baby-chair.

The team, collectively, feel hurt that Mr. Walford excluded from the picture their museum. This consists of Harry Hamilton's tooth and right boot, Palton's jersey, and Rexford's nether-garments.

The Captain's shirt was a striking example of "buried sutures." The artist assured us, however, that he would "take them out" before "putting up" the picture. Copies of the photo. are to be hung in the Arts and Medical Reading-rooms.
