CNOC-MAOL-DHOUN. An Irish Ballad.

TREV. JAMES B. DOLLARD, "SLIAV-NA MON," IN

THE GAEL.

Ah! sweet is Avondhuy that flows by lordly Cappoquin And sighing low the south winds blow across the Vale of Glin. God's blessings on our Irist. land, as well in field and town, But give me strength and let me stand on Cnoc Maol Dhoun.

Now fairy bands are finding me and friendly sprites are they. Oh, fairy hands are binding me, "we'll bear you up" they say: "Come up where starry heather flow'rs and golden gorse encrown The menarch of all lairy-mounds, our Cnoc-Maol-Dhoun."

I yield me to their magic spell, its power is not gain-ssid,
We leave all once the lowly dell, and seek the mountain's head:
feel the breeze of ocean now. I smell the fraoich brown.
And cooled the fever of my brow on Cnoc-Maol-Dhoun.

Afar the shining Suir leaps Ardfinan's wood Index of the share of the second seco down. And fancy teems with olden dreams, on Cnoc Maol-Dhoun.

On yonder plain, in war-array, I see the hosts of Finn. mighty chiefs of ancient day.—I hear their arms dm; ed Oisin ef the Yellow Locks and Conan of Renown. And Renown, Their shadows rise before mine eyes, on Cnoc Maol-Dhoun.

Pass Conall and the Red Branch Knights,-and Maey, to conflict dire. See great Coculain, "Lord of Fights," his spear a flame of fire. A moment through the shifting mist sad Deir-dre's face is shown. Kind fairies grant the sight ye list, on Cnoc-Maol Dhoun.

Am

Ah! poor in sordid wealth of gold, but rich is

Ern still In magic spell and legend old, that cling to heath and hill. Dearer than gold a thousand fold, God's beau-ties rare that crown. The streams that flow thy heights below, old Cnoc-Maol-Dhoun.

On Monday and Tuesday, the 2nd and 3rd inst., we visited Dublin, and took in many of the places of interest in that grand historic and beautiful city. It was our great pleasure on Monday to call on Mr. C. R. Devlin, officer of the Canadian Government Emigration Agency. He insisted upon myself and my companions dim-ing with him, which we most joyfully acceded to, and for two or three hours had a very pleasant time. His office is even not refined and polished gentleman. On Tuesday evening Father Summers and myself dimed with Rev. Father Frannan. He gave a dinner in eigh-boring priests invited to dime with us. NEW BOOK.

NEW BUOK. "What is Liberalism "? by Donffelix Sarda y Salvany, a priest of Barcelona and editor of La Itevista. Popular, has been lately put into English by the publishing firm of B Herder, St. Louis, Mo. At the time of its original publication this work was sent to be Sacred Congregation, accom-panied by a denuciation purporting to be a refutation of the errors contained therein. The Sacred Congregation carefully examined both works and decided that not only in that of D. Feins Sarda's was found nothing contrary to sound docrine but that the author deserved great praise for his "exposition and defence set forth such solidity, order and lucid-ity." The elory halted is mainly and substantially an English translation of D. Feinx Sarda's, Price 75 cents.

marriage to Miss Julia Muruhy, of this town, and daughter of the late Patrick Murphy of South Ops. Tong before the hone appointed for the mar-riage a large number of the relatives and friends had gathered at the church. The bridge entered with her bouner, Mr. P. J. Murphy, and was attended by her sister, Miss Bridget Murphy, while Mr. William Fitzpatrick ac-companied the groom. At 8 a.m. the happy couple were indissoubly united by R ght R-v. Mgr. Laurent, after which followed the Nur-tial Mass. The costume of the bride was "au fait," being a stylish gown of brown lady's cloth with novel enamous trimmings. She wore a charming hat of orown velvet, caught very stylishly with grebe and ospreys. The bridesmait wore a very becoming suit of light green, with hat to match. After Mass the bridel party withdrew to the strains of a wedding march, well rendered by the organist, Miss Minnic Cotkery, and with the many guests proceeded to the residence of burne streets, where, after cordial congratu-lations, a sumptionus wedding breakfast was served. Toasts were proposed and heartily responded to. Active to the bride and groom were accom-

How shall I die? Shall death's harsh yoke, subdue me by a single stroke? Or, shall my fainting frame sustain, The tedious languishing of pain ? Sinking in wa ariness away, Slowly and sadly day by day? Lord, I repose my cale to a Thee, Thou ever hast cared for me.

When shall I die? Shall death's stern call When shall fore: Shall be appeal? Som come my spirit to appeal? Or should I live through circles years, A pligrim in this yate of the best, Surviving those I found the best, Who in the peaceful churchyard rest? Lord, I await Thy wise decree, Thou ever hast cared for me.

Yet, oh sustain me by Thy power; Be with me in life's parting hour; Teil me of favor and pardon won. Through the dear mercies of Thy Son. Then should I feel resigned to go From life's brief jey and fleeting woe; If I in death the Saviour see Who ever hath cared for me.
