less tenants who had been unjustly evicted, was released after a few days on account of her ill health, as the Irish Sisters responsible for her death in prison, as he had been so severely taken to task in the case of John Mandeville and others. But Mr. Kelly's daughter, Mrs. Morrissey and her infant child, were kept in the prison for five weeks, until Mr. J. P. McCarthy, J. P., visited the prison and reported that long confinement in the cell had so totally upon the child that serious consequences were to be expected.

Recently the child, who was only seven weeks old when imprisoned, was released, and the mother also. Such doings as these are what render English rule so contemptible in Ireland. This case, which is but a sample of what is daily occurring, reminds us of Russian rule in Siberia.

Michael Davitt will soon start a weekly newspaper. The recent evictions on the Olphert estate left one thousand three hundred people homeless, and of the whole population there are now only six tenants not under notice of eviction.

A Check to Police Insolvency in Ireland. The Irish police have met with a severe check by the judgment passed by the Lord Chief Baron against the police of Meelin who is a most insulting manner forced themselves into the house of the Rev. Father Kennedy, in order to prevent any meeting to discuss the progress of the Tenants' Defence Fund.

The meeting was called by Father Kennedy, and it was to take place in his house. Three policemen presented themselves at his door and demanded whether it was a meeting of the National League. Father Kennedy informed them that it was a legal meeting, and that they had no right to presume that it was for any illegal purpose whatever.

Constable Hyde said: "I will see to it that your house will not shelter you from the criminal law," and demanded a guarantee that it was not a meeting of the League. Father Kennedy replied: "You have already been sufficiently impertinent to me; and I decline to be a party to your own crime. I will force you to leave my house."

He then called into the house those persons who had arrived to be present at the meeting. The constables declared that no one should enter, unless they entered also, and, sitting the action to the word, they intruded themselves into the house, pushing Father Kennedy aside when he attempted to enter.

Father Kennedy then said: "This is intolerable. You have entered my house by force." Sergeant Hyde answered: "Yes I have, and I will enter your very bedroom." A number of parishioners who attempted to enter were prevented by the police.

Father Kennedy disavowed his parishioners from resenting the insolence of the police, which they were inclined to do, and advised them to return to their homes in view of the impossibility of their holding the meetings as proposed. He told them they could transact their business another day.

Before a Recorder's Court it was held that a Nationalist priest who had refused to answer Sergeant Hyde's insolent questions, for he had no authority to ask them. His Lordship added: "Under the same circumstances I would refuse to answer them."

It thus appears that the priest, not satisfied with the power granted him by the Clerical Act, has habitually employed illegal means to harass the Irish people. It is to be hoped that in future when the policemen intrude themselves illegally into private houses they will be summarily ejected. If the magistrates refuse to obey the law, and send to prison the persons so acting, redress will be had on appeal to the Superior Court. This looks as if there were some likelihood of a partial return to the law.

Another check to police outrages has been given by a Dublin jury, which has given a verdict of £200 for damages against police Captain Hamilton and policeman Freeman, for the murder of Kinisella at Coolgreany. The amount is a small sum for the value of an innocent life, but the enormity of the case is shown by the fact that even a jury partly Nationalist could be brought to condemn the policemen at all, for the verdict was, of course, unanimous. Captain Hamilton had given orders to Freeman to command a squad which forcibly and without justification seized Kinisella's cattle, and he was killed by Freeman in a most treacherous manner.

Such is the way in which law is administered in Ireland; but something is gained when it is known that even a modicum of redress can be got through respectable juries and the Superior Courts. The Irish police have hitherto conducted themselves as despotic autocrats who had in their hands the lives and liberties of the people. Even these checks which they have received will be of incalculable benefit to the country.

THE QUEBEC HOLOCAUST.

ESTIMATES PLACE THE NUMBER OF VICTIMS AT FIFTY. Montreal, May 6.—L'Esperance Asylum (St. Jean de Dieu) was today completely destroyed by fire. This asylum was situated about five miles from Montreal, down the river, in the village of Longue Pointe. It stood about two hundred yards from the main road, in the middle of its own grounds. A broad avenue led from the main gate to the front entrance of the building. It was a very large and handsome brick building, and contained this morning about 1,300 inmates, besides 67 Sisters and 100 nurses. It was built in 1867, and was let to the Providence Nuns, who, under contract with the Government, were the guardians of the insane.

The structure consisted of the main building and four other small buildings connected by wings, and had a front of 630 feet. These edifices were of brick, with freize and ground floor in cut stone. The principal building was six stories high, and the other portions of the building five. The Sisters of Providence spent in founding and organizing this institution $1,132,232, of which sum $700,000 was spent in building. The building was insured by the Government for $300,000 in the Royal Insurance Company. This sum had been reinsured in eighteen local companies in sums varying from $5,000 to $22,000.

AT THE MERCY OF THE FLAMES. This morning between 11 and 12 fire was discovered by the chaplain in the upper part of the center, but the distance from Montreal and the condition of the road enabled everyone to see that help could not arrive in time. At the first alarm the Sisters, nurses and others at once turned to save the patients. A number of the inmates were taken to the doors of the several wards were locked. The bed-ridden were easily managed, but with the other patients it was otherwise. Every effort was made to reach them and to force them when they could not be persuaded to leave the building, and all the while the fire was leaping from window to window and spreading from floor to floor and from center to wing.

How many have been lost cannot precisely be told at present. Some estimate the number at 200, but this is probably exaggerated. Four nuns are among the victims. Sister Theresa, the superintendent in charge of the asylum, was ill at the calamity because known the directors of the Protestant Insane Asylum offered their assistance in the use of the building, which is not yet occupied by its proper patients. In this and other refugees the patients have been received.

WHERE THE FIRE STARTED. The fire started in the second ward, in the women's side in an upper story, and as the ventilation was carried on by a long tiled shaft connected with the towers, flames soon appeared blazing up through the roof in the center of each tower. Streams were laid on, and while they lasted some good was done, but that was for a very brief space, and then the horror of the situation was revealed. The heat was so intense that soon no one could approach the building, and bit by bit, with startling frequency, parts of it were falling in. It was found that the upper portion of the west wing had been cut off by the fire while it set a number of inmates were in the wards, and that the upper portions and floors fell in they carried with them the bodies of patients and nuns to the number of several scores. Meantime beds, furniture and utensils were being showered from the windows, and a stream of ill clad men poured out of the eastern wing.

NOT A MALE PATIENT WAS LOST. The lower women it was different. The few hopeless cases were placed in the lower wards, and they were removed without difficulty; but from the upper wards where the violent patients were secured there came the wildest screams as they resisted the nuns' beseeching to make their escape. When the firemen found they were powerless to save the building, they turned their attention to the inmates, and burst in the doors with axes.

INSIDE, CAPTAIN BENOLT says, it was such a sight as no fireman ever witnessed. In one ward he entered 25 patients, and at his approach they bunched together like a pack of beasts, entwining their arms into one mass of humanity. He seized the nearest; "but," said the Chief, "I could no more separate the crowd than I could the parts of your horse." He tugged at them till his arms were torn, and entangled them in a shroud of flames, and then he escaped with his life.

IN A DEATH TRAP. In another ward three firemen were nearly trapped to death—Captain Doonan, Lambert and Cyr. They entered, and the door closed behind them by a spring lock. There was no handle on the inside, the door resisted their axes, and they rushed to the window, but were driven back by a fireman. The Chief, suspecting their peril, sent to the other side, and the men were carried down on ladders. The engineer of the building, O'Rourke, did good work in saving nine patients, and every fireman made a record of which he may feel proud. On the first alarm the venting shaft to the towers, and burned in a dozen places at once.

BEYOND SISTERS BURNED. And here a melancholy event occurred. One of the Tertiary nuns, Sister Marie, lay sick on the infirmary on the fifth floor, and to her rescue came three others. They seized their companion and bore her in a blanket to the staircase, but they were met by a sheet of flame and the four perished. Let their names be recorded: Soeur Marie, Dameris, Gilbert and Lumens. None of them were over twenty years, and all came from parishes below Quebec. The Sisters worked with the persistence of heroes, by turns imploring, beseeching and commanding. A tremendous number of sinners were saved.

THE COLLAPSE. A loud explosion was followed by a crash of beams. The interior was giving way. Wild faces sank from the windows, and the shrieks of the maniacs were lost in the general uproar. One by one the walls toppled inward, and a fierce blast burst up from the newly added fuel that rose to the dark sky and shot its glare over the St. Lawrence to the southern shore, and even tinged the crest of Mount Royal, ten miles distant. Then it died down into blackness and nothing but a few broken towers remained, but a few broken towers remained, but a few broken towers remained.
