WITCHES AND PLANTS.

Many Legends and Traditions That Link Them Together.

In all countries in which the witch-craft delusion now exists or in which it prevailed in former times we find folklore stories connecting those mys-terious bogies with the plants of those particular regions. Even the great Shakespeare causes his witches to discourse learnedly on the diabolical and of "slips of yew silvered in the moon's eclipse." They are supposed to have had their favorite flowers as well as plants, and in England at the present time foxglove is spoken of as "witch bells" and harebells as "witches' thimbles." The common ragwort is well known as the "witches' horse," the tradition being that they mounted rank growths of that species of weed and "rode the skies," just as the dame with the pointed hat rides the broom in the familiar picture. In Germany and throughout northern Europe it is the belief that witches float from place largely of witches' blossoms and "devil spikes," this last being a species of dwarfed slough grass. St. John's wort, which is now so popular for shoulder and buttonhole bouquets on St. John's eve, was formerly worn for the express purpose of averting the crafts and subtleties of the witches, bogies, ghosts and spirits which the European easantry believed walked abroad on "that night of witching mysteries."-

The Two West Points.

The sensations of the new cadet when, after the climb from the boat landing, he finally reaches the plain those first sensations linger a long while. There are two West Points— the actual West Point and the overarching spiritual one, of which the ca-det only becomes conscious about the time he graduates. The determinate West Point that is to be his master for four years and the shaper of his destiny meets him at the top of the slope with ominous silence. He hears no voice, he sees no portentous figure, but there is communicated in some way through some medium the presence an invisible authority, cold, inexorable and relentiess. Time never wears away this first feeling. It comes back to every graduate on returning to West Point, let his years and his honors be what they may. And perhaps it is just as well that it be so; that there is one place left in our country where vanity of asserted ancestry and the too frequent arrogance of speculative and fortuitous commercial leadership find chill _General Morris Schaff in At-

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers. SUSPICIOUS BIRDS.

Easy to Make Sparrows Show Their

One winter day I made an experiment with sparrows to see exactly how far their natural suspicion would hold out against hunger. I had often no-ticed that if one put a little bit of string, a large button or any strange object among breadcrumbs the spar-rows would not touch the bread. They feared a trap. Starlings are less sus-picious in this way. If they car-about the bread at all, they are more about the bread at all, they are more trustful and do not make any fuss about some small foreign object. But I thought hard weather might make all the difference even to sparrows.

So I put a long piece of apple peel among the bread. It looked quite good to eat, but might be taken by a very suspicious bird for something of the nature of string or take which sparrows.

They go to the seat of trouble, strengthen the kidneys and help them to filter the blood properly and flush off all the impurities which came kidney trouble. Mr. Thomas Petty, Massey, Ont., writes: "After I arrived in Canada from New Zealand, a couple of years ago, I suffered very much from kidney trouble. I tried several remedies, but they did me no good. Finally my back became so lame I could escircely work. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and after taking them I felt like a new man.

The first descent into the fire room of an ocean liner is unforgettable. Going down that series of ladders into the bowels of the old Elbe, the heat seemed to jump 10 degrees a ladder.
At last the final ladder was reached, and we were at the bottom—the bottom of everything was the thought in mor minds than one that afternoon. The head fireman of our watch immediately called my attention to a poker, easi ly an inch and a half thick and twenty

"Hurry up, you sow-pig!" the fireman yelled, and I struggled again with the terrible poker, finally managing to rake out the ashes.-Josiah Flynt in Success Maga-

What Rules the World.

Many years ago John Brougham, Lester Wallack, Artemus Ward and used to meet after the play at windhurst's, in Park row, in New York. One night the question, "What rules the world?" arose, and various opinions were expressed. William Ross Wallace, who was present, retired be fore long and some time later called Thomas J. Leigh from the room an handed to him a poem which he had just written. Mr. Leigh read it aloud to the company, and Mr. Brougham made a happy little speech of acknowl-edgment. The thing was entitled "What Rules the World," and the first stanza ran:

They say that man is mighty, He governs land and sea, He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty scepter
O'er lesser powers that be,
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled,
And the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.

the Tonto Apaches.

In 1864 Dr. Alsap and Lord Duppa well known pioneers, were prospecting with a party in the Bradshaw mountains on the Hassayampa creek. One morning the party separated for the purpose of hunting. In going up a canyon, in which they were separated from their companions by high moun-tains, Duppa's detachment was attacked by a large band of Tonto Apaches The whites gradually fought their way across the ridge with the hope of re joining their companions. During the advance Duppa, who was stationed behind a rock, noticed that he was the bow. Several arrows had fallen at his feet, and one struck him in the arm Raising his rifle, he took aim, and just as he was touching the trigger the sup posed Indian cried, "Don't shoot!" in good English, but it was too late, and the body fell over with life extinct. Soon after the two parties succeeded in forming a junction, and the Indians re treated, leaving their dead.

Out of curiosity the party returned to the place where Duppa killed the supposed Indian and found that it was a white woman, evidently about thirty years of age and dressed in all the paraphernalia of the Apaches. Investigation was made, but no trace of her former whereabouts could ever be ob-

The King En Route.

In the early part of the year King Edward almost always takes a short trip abroad, and the following few points about His Majesty's mode of traveling will not be out of place.

Frequently, when traveling incognito, he favors the Dover and Calais route, and on his arrival at the Gare Maritime of the latter town, partakes of a light luncheon, which invariably consists of clear soup, two poached eggs on toest, a wing of cold chicken, and a plentiful supply of fresh fruit. His Majesty rarely takes cheese, and liqueurs even more seldom.

His luncheon over, King Edward orders a huge bundle of newspapers and periodicals to be brought to his carriage, and these, together with a supply of cigars, keep him occupied until his arrival in the French capital. His Majesty is an inveterate newspaper reader. Leaves also are thy children, and their praise or, on the contrary, curse or secretly blame and sneer, and leaves in like manner are those who shall reaftertimes, for all such things as the tai. His majesty is an investate newspaper reader.

It is an interesting and perfectly true fact that for early morning and unofficial enjoyment, the King far prefers a pipe to cigars or cigarettes.
