MR. RACEY'S DEATH.
FREDERICTON, June 24.—The sudden death of W. R. Racey is the sole topic on the streets to-day. It appears that Mr. Racey had ridden up as far as the forks of the road a short distance above the Heritage and turning there started his horse on a gallop. He had only gone a short distance when he called upon a tripe-phantly indicated by the founder of the United States. The sovereign and the British statesman who believed the colonies should be governed from London and taxed for the benefit of the mother country, lost for England the American colonies and the sovereignty and statehood, taught by our success, who have left to each settlement absolute independence and home rule, have built upon these foundations and vastly strengthened by this reunion the British federation of empire. Among the American speculators there was no jealousy nor spirit of praise and applause. We could both glory in the vitality and virility of the mother country and enjoy it mightily. We were not marching in the procession, but we were present as equal equals in all that constituted a free people and a great nation.
It was pleasing to our neighbors of Canada, they easily took the lead among the colonials and the fact that the province of Quebec was in rebellion when Victoria came to the throne and that her present now here is a Frenchman and a Catholic, appealed to English imagination. That the descendants of the American Revolution were on hand at the coronation of the Queen, was a matter with the children of Wolfe and his soldiers in their loyalty and that Canada has made a beginning by leaving Great Britain against other nations in her tariff, have touched both the British heart and pocket.
I can conjecture no tribute like the popular ovation to the queen ever been given to any human being, respect, reverence, love or gratitude are words too tame and there is no intermediate expression between them and adoration, his prime vessel and his worship, but leaving out the idea of divinity, yesterday's greetings to the Queen, as an emperor, it is a deeply moved was a citizen and a man, not a monarch, and the significance of the event than conscious of his past. Therein lies the grand tribute of her people, but at the same time starting with them the universal joy in the thought of both oppressor and oppressed, that there has not since such a sixty years in recorded time, that all nations have enjoyed its benefits and blessings and none more than our town. But for this day and place, the crowd only saw what Great Britain had gained during her reign, and accented praise therefore to her. Her reign has been a period of emancipation in English history, the prerogatives of the throne have diminished and by her rule and conduct its power has increased, that this welcome came with such acclaim and unanimity from the people, governing themselves who give it its might and glory.
We, Americans, glory in our country and in its marvelous developments in a hundred years and July assert ourselves on the fourth of July. The celebration

THE LONDON JUBILEE PROCESSION.
Channey M. Dewey, who is one of the most gifted and eloquent orators that the United States has witnessed the great jubilee procession in London. The following are the impressions it left upon his mind which are worthy of the man as well as the occasion to which he belongs.
The Diamond Jubilee procession has passed and has left a lasting impression. Its preparation required sixty years, and it was over in sixty minutes. Prize power, adoration, were its characteristics. It is the imperial coronation of the British Empire, the grandest and most heroic and thoughtful for the action.
As to the present, it was dramatic and historic. The Lord Mayor, in his robes of office, meeting the sovereign at the city gates, recalled the early struggles of liberty in the privileges won from Kings by free cities, and the sheriff, in medieval costume, recalling the monarch within his balliwick, gave a glimpse of the origin and recognition of civil rights by the throne.
The monarch escorted by Prince and guarded by the military forces of the realm, both regular and volunteers, national and colonial, evidenced the strength of the monarchical system with this people.
We, Americans, glory in our country and in its marvelous developments in a hundred years and July assert ourselves on the fourth of July. The celebration

Mr. Hobson had been on the train between this city and Woodstock, via Gibson, almost over since the opening of the road, nearly thirty years ago. His health compelled his retirement two months ago. His death of heart failure occurred on Monday night, at Seven Creek, Sunbury County. Mr. Hobson was 59 years of age, and leaves a widow and four children. Mr. Hobson of this city is a brother. White, yellow soldiers troop by each accelerating and increasing the total wave of enthusiasm and presenting a panorama of power unequalled in history.
The deeds of this power were in the American revolution and it expanded into this wonderful spectacle by the principles of Self Government so triumphantly vindicated by the founders of the United States. The sovereign and the British statesman who believed the colonies should be governed from London and taxed for the benefit of the mother country, lost for England the American colonies and the sovereignty and statehood, taught by our success, who have left to each settlement absolute independence and home rule, have built upon these foundations and vastly strengthened by this reunion the British federation of empire. Among the American speculators there was no jealousy nor spirit of praise and applause. We could both glory in the vitality and virility of the mother country and enjoy it mightily. We were not marching in the procession, but we were present as equal equals in all that constituted a free people and a great nation.
It was pleasing to our neighbors of Canada, they easily took the lead among the colonials and the fact that the province of Quebec was in rebellion when Victoria came to the throne and that her present now here is a Frenchman and a Catholic, appealed to English imagination. That the descendants of the American Revolution were on hand at the coronation of the Queen, was a matter with the children of Wolfe and his soldiers in their loyalty and that Canada has made a beginning by leaving Great Britain against other nations in her tariff, have touched both the British heart and pocket.
I can conjecture no tribute like the popular ovation to the queen ever been given to any human being, respect, reverence, love or gratitude are words too tame and there is no intermediate expression between them and adoration, his prime vessel and his worship, but leaving out the idea of divinity, yesterday's greetings to the Queen, as an emperor, it is a deeply moved was a citizen and a man, not a monarch, and the significance of the event than conscious of his past. Therein lies the grand tribute of her people, but at the same time starting with them the universal joy in the thought of both oppressor and oppressed, that there has not since such a sixty years in recorded time, that all nations have enjoyed its benefits and blessings and none more than our town. But for this day and place, the crowd only saw what Great Britain had gained during her reign, and accented praise therefore to her. Her reign has been a period of emancipation in English history, the prerogatives of the throne have diminished and by her rule and conduct its power has increased, that this welcome came with such acclaim and unanimity from the people, governing themselves who give it its might and glory.
We, Americans, glory in our country and in its marvelous developments in a hundred years and July assert ourselves on the fourth of July. The celebration
