A DOWN TOWN MERCHANT.

Having passed several sleepless nights, disturbed by the agonies and cries of a suffering child, and becoming convinced that Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup was just the article needed, procured a supply for the child. On reaching home and acquainting his wife with what he had done, she refused to have it administered to the child, as she was strongly in favor of Homeopathy. That night night the child passed in suffering, and the parents without sleep. Returning home the day following, the father found the baby still Legislative Council: Read a first time. worse; and while contemplating another sleepless night, the mother stepped from the room to attend to some domestic duties, and left the the Soothing Syrup to the baby, and said nothing. That night all hands slept well, and the little fellow awoke in the morning bright and happy. The mother was delighted with the sudden and wonderful change, and although at first offended at the deception practiced upon her, has continued to use the Syrup, and suffering crying babies and restless nights have disappeared. A single trial of the Syrup never yet failed to relieve the baby, and overcome the prejudices of the mother. Sold by all Druggists. 25 cents a bottle.

A Mystery.

Several pistol shots disturbed the peaceful denizens of West End, on Thursday evening about 12 o'clock, and many very ingenious conjectures have arisen as to the occasion Lumber

On the Tobique River Mr. Geo. T. Baird of Perth Station, has 60 men employed in the woods and will cut between 3.000,000 and 4,000-000 feet of spruce this season.

THURSDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

MORNING SESSION.

After routine the House took recess till 12 'clock. At noon Mr, Speaker arrived and taking the chair announced the order of the day.

Hill moved the order of the day. Mr

Speaker read the proposed address.

Hill rose and said he did not purpose making extended comments from the first; and had he so intended he should have been prevented The first paragraph of the address needed no comment. The second paragraph did call for a brief word. The House would beyond doubt concentrate that it is a second paragraph did call for a brief word. The House would beyond doubt concur that it was quite desirable that as to the enthusiasm and interest evinced on the visit; no question as to the deep seated loyalty of our people. It was too sincere, and too manifest for that. He did not refer to this lip loyalty that finds expression in the mouth of everyone who takes the platform, but he did refer to that deep devotion to the Throne and the person of our Queen. And without connecting the ideas, he might remark that there were some who think that a change in our political relations would be conducive to our interests; but he had yet to learn that any change we could possibly make, could give us a better could possibly make, could give us a better system of government than we enjoy. Our eople moved with a greater feeling of respon-bility; they had more complete control over those affairs that concerned themselves than any other people on the face of the Globe.

He thought that when the census would come to be taken it would be found that the wheat industry, and agriculture in general had out-condition, it would have left less for the Gov-ernment to do. [Is not this depressed city, that could not help out its own Exhibition, the same big-feeling city that wants to pay $100,000 New Brunswick?—ED. STAR.] He felt quite sure the House would heartly approve of the course of the Government in taking prompt measures to relieve the distress occasioned by the tornado at the North. The House would feel pleased to know that correspondence had been going on between the Local and Dominion Governments relative to the old claims. These nents relative to the old claims. These Probabilities. were Emigration Expenditures, Short Term Prisoners in the Penetentiary, the Tracadie Lazaretto, and the Western Extension matters;

The 9th resolution was an echo of a resolution which passed the House last winter. It for some weeks rast has been running day and night. The mill commenced running on January 5th, since which time 3000 bushels of wheat and over 2000 bushels of buckwheat have been ground. > He would not attempt to comment on the last section of the speech, but felt assured that the measures dimly foreshadowed therein, would meet the approval of the House. In conlusion he begged to move the address.

On the motion being put by Mr. Speaker, Blair arose. He said there were a few matters that he had to refer to, not touching exactly on the address, or the speech of the mover; and that he A man giving the name of George Pond has raised quite an undignified flutter among some of our prominent merchants. BILLS.

Lynott asked leave to introduce a bill to further amend an Act passed in the 35th year of Her Majesty's Reign, incorporating the Grand Southern Railway Company. The Bill was read a first time.

Sayre introduced a bill to change the Constitution of this Province so far as relates to the structure of the paragraph he would gather that the Government had intended to sntroduce no stitution of this Province so far as relates to the sugar relating to our agricultural department. He suppose the paragraph he would gather that the Government had intended to sntroduce no stitution of this Province so far as relates to the sugar relating to our agricultural department. He suppose the sugar ment of their predecessors for public works—canals and railways. They did not feel disposed to cancel these engagements, as there engagements of their predecessors for public works—canals and railways. They did not feel disposed to cancel these engagements, as there was nafed the large railway contracts. They had to provide for an increased expenditure of $5,000,000 on account of public debt. It was necessary to complete the remaining links of 180 miles to com

[Mr. Elder who had been regarding Mr. Blair with attention all along, here hnng down his head. Ed. From the tenor of the paragraph he would gather that the Government had intended to sntroduce no measure relating to our agricultural department. [He "gathered" wrongly. Ed.]

There was another matter, proper to be dealt with here, and this matter was a publication, or a pamphlet issued under the authority of the Surveyor General, and ostensibly to furnish "information to intending settlers." He was curious to know what the book was, on first getting it, whether a school primer, or advanced text book. He opened it and found Fredericton at the time the book was printed, was the copital of New Brunswick; that the streets ran at right angles. He found under the heading "principal towns," that St. John was incidentally mentioned; but on going to Northumberland he found a swarm of towns. There were "Newcastle, Chatham, Douglastown, Nelson, Blackwille, Boiestown, and Doaktown," and goodness knows how many others. Under the heading "Forests" we were told about the spruce; ond we were also told that the hemlock was valuable for its bark, but that if stringent measures were not taken it would soon be destroyed. He then turned to the cover, and found the book was "information for intending settlers." [Mr. Blair here became amused at his own wit. Ed.] He said the grammatical construction of the paragraphs was something new to him. The settler was told for example that "an idea of the railway facilities of the province may be thus summarized."

The man who compiled the book should be handed over to justice, and the issue should be stopped. And then some other extraordinary statements were made. In one settlement the settler sold his wheat for $2 a bushel; in another he received but $1 for it. Buckwheat brought 25 cents per bushel in one settlement and 60 cents in another. The quoted yields showed about the same difference as the price.

With regard to the paragraph on the Parliament Buildings, he thought it somewhat strange t minate.

There was nothing said about the changes since the recess; but he had observed that Hon Mr. Marshall had allowed himself to be persuaded into the Government. He congratulated Mr. Marshall and the Government. And then he took his seat,

The Attorney General then suggested recess; which was declared till 2.30.
