Canadian Papal Zouaves.

A Solemn requiem Mass. was celebrated Friday morning in the Catholic cathedral, Montreal, for the souls of the Canadian Pontifical Zouaves, who fought for the defence of Pius IX. from 1861 to 1870. The Rev. Canon Archambault officiated, with Abbes Charest and Dauth, as deacon and sub-deacon respectively. Archbishop Fabre occupied a stall among the canons. There were over one hundred present. After the sermon, all the Zouaves gathered in the chapel just erected by them, and there read an act of consecration to the Sacred Heart. An adjournment then took place to the grand parlor in the archbishop's palace, where a resolution of protest was adopted. The resolution read that the Canadian ex-Papal Zouaves in general meeting assembled, lodged a solemn protest against the sacrilegious spoliation of the popes, as operated by the Italian troops in 1870 By inaugurating their chapel on this occasion, the Canadian Zouaves wished to show that neither time nor distance could make the Catholic world forget that it is the duty of every son of the church to recognize and support the inalienable rights of the papacy. In speaking on the motion, Chevalier Prendergast remarked that in 1870 they were weak in numbers only. However, thank heaven, their sons were now numerous, and if occasion required it, he trusted that those sons would do what they had been unable to do themselves. Before parting, let them now all unite in a hearty "Hurrah for Leo XIII., Pope and King." The cry was given with enthusiasm and the meeting was dispersed.

General Herbert's Valedictory

General Herbert's valedictory to the Canadian forces was published in the Canada Gazette on Saturday. He says that before relinquishing his command he desires to thank those who for a period of nearly five years have given him loyal support and co-operation in an endeavor to render the forces an efficient and powerful factor for the defence of the empire. During this period Gen. Herbert was encouraged by seeing Canada assume her share of the burthen necessary to secure the inviolability of her Pacific coast, and by exceptional efforts made by militia units allotted for the defence of Halifax and Esquimault, in order to fit themselves for the duties they have to perform in the time of emergency. General Herbert had observed with pleasure the general awakening throughout the militia of a spirit of emulation for practical efficiency, together with a considerable development in rifle shooting. He expresses appreciation of the excellent material in the rural militia and commends the sobriety, order and soldierly behaviour in the different camps of exercise. He extends his thanks to the officers and men of the permanent force, and urges them to continue to present to the active militia the high standard of efficiency. The address closes by conveying the best wishes to all ranks, coupled with the hope that he be remembered by them with feelings of esteem and respect those which he will always bear towards the Canadian comrades and fellow subjects whom he had the honor to command.

OTTAWA advices say that it is generally believed there that Girouard, M. P., for Jacques Cartier, will be appointed to the Supreme Court bench at Friday's meeting of the Cabinet.

A curious request was made the other day to the officers of the department of inland revenue, Ottawa. A man named Myers, living at Apple Hill, Glengarry Co., is at loggerheads with the local doctor, their difference, it appears, now being before the courts. Myers charges the doctor with mal-practice, and the physician in turn has entered a suit against Myers for defamation of character. While the suit was still before the courts, Myers was taken ill and went to his friend's, the enemy, for a dose, which was handed to him with a remark to the effect that it would fix him all right. Before taking the dose Myers thought he would try some of it on the household cat. Tabby took the medicine and then lay down and died. Myers became seriously alarmed at this and informed a neighbor of the circumstance. The neighbor thereupon suggested that a dose should be administered to a dog. This suggestion was carried out, and the dog also died. This was in February last, and now Myers appears at the department with a mixture which he says was the medicine given him seven months ago and asks to have it analyzed. The request was not granted. Myers being referred to a public analyzer.

Libeling King Leopold.

A few days ago the attention of the Belgian Consul-General at Ottawa was drawn to an article appearing in Le Monde, Montreal, seriously reflecting upon the honesty of the King Leopold II. It was alleged that in administering the vast estate of his sister, Empress Charlotte, King Leopold had misappropriated the funds entrusted to him. Consul-General de Faconval at once requested his Vice-Consul at Montreal to call upon the publishers of Le Monde, and request them to retract, which they promised to do. Next day, however, the Vice-Consul forwarded to the Consul-General a letter from the publishers of Le Monde, stating that they could not now make the retraction demanded, but would throw the columns of the paper open to such explanations as he (the Vice-Consul) might see fit to make. In acknowledging the receipt of this the Consul-General instructed his Vice-Consul to make one further attempt to secure a retraction of the alleged libel from Le Monde, failing in which the Consul-General states he will at once communicate the facts to his Government in Belgium, with a view to having the publishers of Le Monde punished, as paragraph 125 of the new Criminal Code provides for such offences. The code says that everyone is guilty of an indictable offence, and liable to one year's imprisonment, who without lawful justification publishes any libel tending to degrade, revile, or expose to hatred and contempt in the estimation of the people of any foreign State any Prince or person exercising sovereign authority over any such State.

THE police made a large seizure of lobsters shortly after twelve o'clock Friday night, the lot comprising thirty-two cases, about fifteen of which were marked with the signature, perhaps forged, of F. McKenzie, the fishery warden at Pinette and Point Prim. Who the owners are has not yet been found out. About midnight Sergeant Bradley and officers Taylor and Hooper noticed a passing sloven near Lower Queen Street, and shortly after another went by. On the latter was a load covered with a large canvass. The team entered the lane on King St. in the rear of the Union House and the officers soon followed. They at first suspected stolen goods but the truckman had unloaded and skipped. Two strangers who refused to tell their names and a merchant's clerk were near by. The officers notified Marshal Cameron who held an examination of the goods and confiscated them as lobsters illegally caught out of season. The thirty-two cases were transferred to the Marshall's office where they now are, Mr. Lord, the fishery inspector, was notified Saturday. He telegraphed the department at Ottawa for instructions.—Ex.

A Great Scheme.

The Montreal Daily Witness, of a recent date, is responsible for the following interesting piece of information: "The Jesuit Fathers of Montreal have always been noted for their progressive and enterprising spirit, and any scheme undertaken by them has always been successfully carried out. Their fine church, with its music, and their college as recently enlarged and fitted up with all modern improvements, are instances of their efforts in doing things on a large and successful scale. The Fathers are now credited with having decided upon carrying another grand and important scheme, in the shape of an observatory to be constructed over St. Mary's College The rumor comes from a trustworthy source, and the project is said to have reached such a point that negotiations are already going on with architects with a view to carry on the scheme at as early a date as possible. It is the intention to make the proposed observatory second to none on the continent. Foundations are to be placed at a great depth in order to avoid all possible vibrations, and the observatory proper will rise to a considerable height in the centre of the building, at the place now occupied by the dome, and will be by far the highest point in and around the city. The structure will combine elegance and solidity, and all the most improved scientific apparatus will be used in the different stories and departments for meteorological, astronomical and other observations. Special accommodation will also be provided for visitors, who can obtain from that elevated point a splendid view of the surrounding country. The work done in the observatory will, it is said, be of a kind to call for grants from both federal and provincial governments. With the large number of scientific men at their disposal, the Jesuits are in a position to successfully carry out this scheme from which the city and the country at large must benefit in a scientific point of view.
