be obtained in the same time, and purpose three hens and ducks were selected, all hatched in February, and nourished with suitable food. In the following autumn the ducks had laid two hundred and twenty eggs, while the hens laid none. In the following February, the laying season began again with the ducks and continued uninterruptedly until August. They showed no inclination to set, but became very thin, although they afterwards fattened up somewhat. The total number of eggs laid by the hens amounted to two hundred and fifty-seven, or eighty-six eggs each; and thrise hundred and the two hundred and three hundred and the typical seach for the ducks, which were smaller than the hens, yet they proved to be decidedly superior in productiveness to the hens.
