STILL FUNNY MAN—IS ERNEST HOGAN

Colored Chap of Vaudeville
Fame at the Grand With a Musical Extravaganza.

"Rufus Rastus," the famous musical extravaganza which has at its head Ernest Hogan, of vaudeville fame, immensely pleased large audiences at the Grand New Year's afternoon and evening. The cast is made up of colored people, and indeed they are a creditable lot of show people.

Hogan has the reputation of having drawn as high as $500 a week in vaudeville for a number of years, and those who saw him yesterday are willing to agree that he was worth the money. Undoubtedly he is the funniest colored man on the stage, and he knows when to stop and not overdo the fun. His singing qualities aren't of the finest, but he sang a song which made a big hit. It is called "Wouldn't It Be a Dream?" is a topical ditty, and Hogan's rendition of it made it an instantaneous hit.

The colored comedian was supported by a very capable colored cast, several of the members possessing very fine voices. "Rufus Rastus" is a decidedly story running farce, with a very funny, sumptuous, one of the most magnificent boat scenes ever exhibited at the Grand being introduced in the second act. The costuming is rich and tasty, and on the whole the production ranks among the very best of the musical attractions on the road.

LAST RED FLAG AT MOSCOW DOWN; REMNANT OF REBELS SURRENDER

Moscow, Jan. 1.—This morning a surrender of thirty rebels, the guard of the revolutionary committee, ended the "December uprising in Moscow." The thirty were in a small black dwelling in the Presna quarter near the end of the Gorbatoff bridge. Canon were planted at close range, the house was surrounded by soldiers of the Seminsky Regiment of the Guard, save only in the direct line of artillery fire. A dozen solid shots were fired into the house. The red flag still floated over it but the only answer was a few shots from the windows.

Then a company of the Seminsky Regiment advanced and fired into the upper windows. At the third volley a white flag fixed to a bayonet was shoved through a broken pane and frantically waved.

The garrison of thirty marched out and laid down a strange collection of rifles and repeating shot guns. Strange to say, not one of the men had been wounded and when they found that they would not be immediately put to death, gathered round the soldiers, stretched their hands eagerly over the fires and begged cigarettes from the guards.
