CHEMISTS AND DRUGGISTS,
216 Dundas St. W., London, Ont.

A new vegetable for table use is the "Cranberry tataria," an unbelonging plant resembling a kale. The sweet roots, raw and cooked, are eaten by Tartars and Cossacks, and for these and the sprouts also, it is recommended for cultivation by a prominent member of the Academie de Cuisine de Paris, who declares that it is finer in flavor than asparagus and cauliflower, which it surpasses and is seasoned in butter, a salad of young leaves and slices of root being another dainty luxury.
