DILATORY CONTRACTORS

THE YOUNG STREAM OF THE PROPERTY AND CONTROLLED AS A STREAM OF THE P

THE UP-STREET MERCHANTS
are in daily dread of the opening of the street above Queen. They are afraid of a four or six weeks' blockade in the busy season. They thought a week's delay would be the most they would have to undergo; the prospect is that it will be a month if the contractors are not pushed.

contractors are not pushed.

IN CASE OF FIRE,
how would the hose reels get into Yonge street, and what would be the prospect of a successful fight with the flames? This is matter for serious consideration. The roadway should be at least left in as free a condition as possible at the close of each day's labor. labor.

How long will it last?
The distance from King to Queen street is about 350 yards. Work has been going on on that section for three weeks. It is probably an over-estimate to say that it is half completed, and at this rate it will be finished by about the lst of September. Now, the portion yet remaining to be done, namely, from Queen to Bloor, is a mile and a quarter, or 2200 yards long. All that the contractors need do, therefore, is to work out the following little sum in proportion. If it takes six weeks to block-pave 350 yards, how long will it take to pave 2200? The HOW LONG WILL IT LAST ? how long will it take to pave 2200? The answer is, between 38 and 39 weeks. Thirty-eight weeks from the 1st of September bring us very near to June, 1882! This calculation is far too favorable to the conealculation is far too favorable to the contractors, for the present season is the most favorable for the carrying on of the work. In the winter not only will the ground be frozen, but the accumulations of snow will have to be removed bodily from the sections on which work is preceding. Taking this into convention of the section of th moved bodily from the sections on which work is proceeding. Taking this into consideration, if the contractors continue to move at their present slow gait, it is probable that Yonge street will be paved in about year from the present time. SOME POINTS.
