A letter from P A Sharpless, druggist, Marion, Ohio, in writing of Dr Thomas. Eclectric Oil, says: One man was cured of sore throat of eight years' standing with one bottle. We have a number of cases of rheumatism that have been cured when other remedies have failed. We consider it the best medicine sold.

"The Leaves shall be for the Healing of the Nations."

The leaf of the Wild Strawberry has verified that scriptural quotation. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the marvel of healing in all varieties of summer complaints, and fluxey, cholera morbus, cholera infantum and every form of bowel complaints of children or adults promptly yields to its power of healing.

When the marriage of Lord Cremorne and Miss Wombwell took place at Coxwold, England, the village was plentifully decorated with flags, and the interior of the church was made beautiful with flowers, ferns and plants. There was an immense crowd, which cheered the procession, quite in the style that Americans have never seen except on the stage, and flowers were strewn before the bride. A thousand persons were given a dinner in a pavilion temporarily of ected, and it is not noted that the 700 "cottages and laborers" took any offence at being carefully separated at the tables from the 200 "upper-class people." GOOD ADVICE

BY P. M.

Upon being introduced to a lady you should endeavor to make yourself as agreeable as possible, and fall back upon your resources of politeness and gentility. dash yourself at her feet and demand her hand instantly in marriage, and to repeat the program in the course of every fresh introduction, would be both indelicate and unnecessary, and might have a tendency to suggest your removal to Flatbush.

Sleeping on the bows of ferry boats land dozing upon logs in the Mis sissippi are practices that ought to be altogether avoided, as some unpleasant consequences frequently ensue. Railroad tracks and roofs of slenting houses are also objectionable places for an afternoon

Avoid infuriated bulls, also mad dogs. Never walk backs ard on crossing astreet of a Saturday afternoon. It is an experiment from which our greatest philosophers would shrink. During the progress of a deep tragedy, for instance, when every breath is hushed, and a pin could be distinctly heard to drop, and just as the star of the evening is about to clutch the dramatic diadem, to spring up at that eventful moment and propose three cheers and a tiger for Smith, or any other man, and follow it up by yelling lustily, would be rude in the extreme; and if there was any point at all in it, neither actor or audience would be likely to see it. Your chances of not enjoying the afterpiece and of being rushed out and handled without gloves would be decidedly favorable. Throwing heads of cabbages and bunches of onions on the stage, and making it a point to hiss everybody, is another species of carrying on that will never become popular with either managers or performers, and they will never learn to appreciate it. Neither is that system of attempting to elimb from the parquette to the boxes, over the heads of the people, commendable, as it serves to distract the attention of the assemblage. Bawling out the private name of a player as he struts behind the footlights and making funny inquiries after the health of his poor nucle, how he is off for soap, etc., is another questionable proceening, and no true patriot should indulge in it.

Refusing to pay your fare on the city railroad cars, and invisting on smoking and singing during the busiest portion of the day, will lead to a summary ejection with about as much certainty as the needle to the pole.

On entering a strange bar-room in a strange town, pocketless, rush up, in an excited manner, and order the barkeeper, in stentorians, to fix you up a corpse reviver, slapping him at the same time familiarly on the back. When you toss it off with do nonchalance, dash madly for the door and escape. The effect will be electric. It is a wast improvement on the lamb-like movement and dispenses with the query, "Is my face good for two drinks?" which invariably ends with a decided negative. This system should always be introduced in preference, and is more in accordance with the spirit of the age.

No true gentleman will refuse you a light from his cigar if approached in a proper and respectful manner; but tackling him with a short, black pipe, and grabbing his partaga, is carrying bad manners to such an extent that forbearance ceases to be a virtue, and none but a low fellow, whose education has been most sadly neglected, would attempt such a ghastly joke.

Bursting out laughing on solemn occasions, such as during the delivery of a death sentence in a court of justice, or on hearing the sudden demise of an acquaintance, or in a meeting-house, is vulger, beyond question, and will not enhance your prospects for sexton of any church, or even for matrimony.
