(A) The nautical propensity, however, evinced by Columbus in early life, is common to boys of enterprising spirit and lively imagination brought up in maritime cities; to whom the sea is the highroad to adventure and the region of romance. Genoa, too, walled in and straitened on the land side by rugged mountains, yielded but little scope for enterprise on shore, while an opulent and widely extended commerce, visiting every country, and a roving marine, battling in every sea, naturally led forth her children upon the waves, as their propitious element. Many, too, were induced to emigrate by the violent factions which raged within the bosom of the city, and often dyed the streets with blood.

(B) As he approached the shore, Columbus, who was disposed for all kinds of agreeable impressions, was delighted with the purity and suavity of the atmosphere, the crystal transparency of the sea, and the extraordinary beauty of the vegetation. He beheld, also, fruits of an unknown kind upon the trees which overhung the shores. On landing he threw himself on his knees, kissed the earth, and returned thanks to God with tears of joy. His example was followed by the rest, whose hearts indeed overflowed with the same feelings of gratitude. Columbus, then rising, drew his sword, displayed the royal standard, and assembling round him the two captains, with the rest who had landed, he took solemn possession in the name of the Castilian sovereigns, giving the island the name of San Salvador.

B. Cæsar Bk. I. ch. xxxvi.

Ad hæc Ariovistus respondit : Jus esse belli, ut qui vicissent, iis, quos vicissent, quemadmodum vellent, imperaret : itum Populum Romanum vistis, non ad alterius prescriptum, sed ad suum arbitrium, imperare consueisse. Si ipse Populo Romano non prescriberet, quemadmodum suo jure uteretur ; non oportere sese a Populo Romano in suo jure imperidi. Æduos sibi, quoniam bellii fortunam tentassent, et armis congressi ac superari essent, stipendiarios esse factos, Magnam Cæsarem injuriam facere, qui suo adventu vectigalia sibi deteriora ficeret.
