

doors of many homes, where no practical knowledge of true Christ-living obtains, and where we are sure of a welcome whenever we can go, with magnificent opportunities of seed-sewing, which cannot fail to be fruitful in establishing stronger, purer lives. If you could realize the possibilities of development you would rejoice to be permitted to share in this work."

Practical results of the usefulness of this branch of work have been recorded in Japan and China, Turkey and Africa, India and Burma, Mexico and Spain.

Dr. Judson Smith, Secretary of the A. B. C. F. M. Board writes, "We have kindergarten work in several of our missions. Perhaps more in Turkey than anywhere else. It is very successful and is regarded by our missionaries as an important addition to other forms of missionary effort."

Miss Nellie Bartlett, also of A. B. C. F. M. Society in Turkey, says, "The kindergarten is now believed to be a necessity in every mission station. God grant the day may not be far distant when this great desire may be realized. Before the massacre there were about twenty schools, with from 850 to 900 children. There is greater demand for teachers than can be supplied. There is need for earnest, Christian kindergartners, who will go out and not only direct the work, but help in training up a native teaching staff."

Surely such testimonies are sufficient to bring before us the glorious opportunity which this department of mission work affords. The scope for activity is unlimited. There is a call from the field for more earnest Christian kindergartners, who will go out to foreign lands and there lay down their lives in service to Him who was among men as one that served. Has such a life any attractions for us? Is the Master to-day, by means of facts, setting before any of us an open door?

Whether it be in this department of work we may be called to labor, still on each of us is binding that tender command of our Saviour, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not." Fellow students, are we, by lives of selfish
